IN THE BED CHAMBER.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

Peacefully she lieth, with her twin white hands
Folded in calm and statue-like repose;
Her hair like ripples over golden sands,
And from her lips the fragrance of the rose.

Sancta Maria! how like it is to death,
Save the quick bosom 'neath its gauzy screen,
Two snowy hills that by her perfumed breath
Seem drifted from the sweet warm vale between.

What a rare picture! and how softly falls
The golden light through the rich casement there;
The scene seems half enchantment, and recalls
The sleeping palace and the princess fair.

See where the slender drapery half reveals
The perfect lines that words were weak to praise,
And where, with jealous care this fold conceals
Some charm that might allure an angel's gaze.

Peace! come away, and leave her to her rest;
Her sleep is sweet; she dreams, perchance of love—
So draw the curtains of her snowy nest,
Nor dare disturb the slumber of the dove.

THE SIN PHANTOM;

THE KEEPER'S DESTINY.

CHAPTER XXXI.—CONTINUED.

McDonald bit his lip. She was growing colder and more self-possessed. Her hand rested on the open window ledge, and her face, peering forth, became sad and reflective—a touch of wistful yearning—almost love blended with its sadness. The quiet midland town grew shadowy in the distance; housetops and spires were dim, and above them all she could discern the faint circle of revolving light round the flags on the roof of the hippodrome. Remembrance wandered back to it. Till within the last hour she had been the nightly idol of applauding thousands, and an idolatry to one whose faith and love would never die. She could recall his tenderness, his delicate reverence, the kingly homage that lowered his proud head in gentleness to her always. There was never a daring license in his look, never a thrill that warned her instincts in his touch, nor an unholy quiver in his voice. If he trembled when she suffered him to touch her lips in a caress, it was with pure delight; and if, moved to unwonted tenderness by the simple chivalric beauty of his devotion, she even caressed him voluntarily, he would thank her with a look in which the poetry of love shone earnestly. And she was leaving him—driving a sharper than an iron dagger to the strong, full heart whose every beat was a throb for her. She was leaving him who would as soon have thought of striking off his right hand as of whispering a sullying thought; the man who had saved her from insult, been her protector in one bitter time of need, worked patiently to make himself worthy of her and win bread for both, and felt well rewarded in the hope of a future made glorious by the light of her affection. Housetops and spires faded out of view; the hippodrome and Drocburn were seen no more. On went the carriage, and Corinne turned from her sorrowful reverie to look at her companion and her tempter. The thought would come despite her infatuation—would he, the treacherous friend, the promise breaker and selfish coward, be a faithful lover and a kind one? Had she obeyed her instincts she would have answered, no; but he was there to charm her doubts away, to smile into her eyes, and whisper words of passionate devotion. And she believed him as did Eve the serpent, changing the deathless Eden into a world for men to sin, and toil and die in; she believed him as did Eve the serpent who taught her to resign love's innocent joy that she might taste of passion's bitter fruit. Corinne left a rich, unsullied past at Drocburn and went blindly towards a clouded future, from which there could be no return. She saw the precipice and tried to shun it, but the tempting hand led and hurried her on; yet in her inmost soul there was a voice that said a warning—a sense that fought against temptation, and urged her to repent while there was time.

"It seems so cruel to leave him in this time of trouble," she pleaded, with remorseful emotion. "I should like to have seen him once more, and parted in kindness. Shall we go back?"

McDonald went to her seat, and drew her head to his shoulder. "We are better as it is, my Corinne. We must forget him, and think only of each other."

"But he trusted me so deeply—was so good, so gentle."

"Am I not gentle too, Corinne? Is not my love as deep? Has it not outlived long years of absence, and grown stronger since we met? Give Gambert a kindly thought; he does deserve it, and I am not angry."

Corinne said no more. She let McDonald's arm encircle her; and her lustrous eyes, loving and mournful too, looked into his. What thoughts were passing in her mind he knew not, but they were such ones he could see. She tried to read the future in his face, discover what the time to come might bring in return for the rash faith which had made her cast away a world of sterling truth. They halted first at Springbourne, a small outlying town between the midland and the eastern borders. It derived its name from a spring which was supposed to possess curative powers in most diseases to which mortal flesh is heir.

"You are the Countess Dunault," said McDonald, with a re-assuring pressure of Corinne's hand. It is necessary that you appear so to avoid suspicion."

The crimson glow grew deeper in Corinne's cheek. She made no reply. The carriage had stopped at the Springbourne Hotel. The courier approached respectfully to take instructions.

"The horses are tired, Jules?" interrogated Simon,

"They require rest, my lord, and the next place is some distance."

"Very well, Jules; see if there is suitable accommodation for the countess and myself; arrange for the servants also."

Jules, a well-educated German, who thought that next to being a gentleman of fortune there was nothing like being his courier, bowed lowly, but a twitch of the eyelid betrayed his surprise at hearing his master speak of Corinne as the countess.

"And post-horses?" he suggested.

"If they have them. If not, we will stay the night."

"Assuredly. Shall Madelen attend my lady?"

"Madelen?"

"Madelen, my lord. Madelen was the first who followed Messieur Gambert, and seeing the carriage waiting thought best to stay with it."

Corinne did not attempt to conceal her pleasure. The presence of one of her own sex was a protection. Strange that she should have been glad instinctively of a protection from her lover.

"Madelen was quite right," said McDonald, concealing his chagrin, "she had better attend her ladyship. Make inquiries as to accommodation at once."

The courier had no occasion to take much trouble. The advent of a traveling carriage-and-four with postilions and courier was not a frequent occurrence. The establishment was proud of its resources and its waiters. The latter, to the number of six, all pensive as to aspect and dingy as to cravats, displayed themselves in the hall, and the chief, mistaking the courier for a distinguished visitor, met him with a profound obeisance.

"There are apartments for Messieur the Count," began Jules—

The head waiter bowed more profoundly than before.

"And for Madame the Countess?"

The head waiter's bow reached the superlative degree of profundity. The homage paid to titles rather amused Jules. He had seen domestic service on the continent where titles are plentiful, and Jules could lay some distant claim to a title on his own acount.

"And horses—post?" he added.

The head waiter shook his head. There was a livery and bait stables adjoining the hotel, but they only contained a basket chaise with pony to match; one dilapidated brougham; and a wall eyed horse, which was used to the brougham's peculiarities and did not mind a sudden collapse of the springs; a perilous dog cart, a ride in which usually resulted in a fracture of the skull or a broken collar bone; and a vicious brown cob which invariably assisted in effecting the result last mentioned. Three drives with the brown cob and dog cart were fully equal to a new pair of shafts and the brain fever. So the head waiter shook his head, and his subordinates, who had begun to brighten at the prospect of visitors, relapsed into pensive dinginess again.

"Then Messieur the Count must stay the night," said Jules.

The subordinate waiters scattered with alacrity, and except for the head-attendant the hall was clear when McDonald handed Corinne out. Her long cloak hid her theatrical costume, or that most pensive of head-waiters would have been led to entertain peculiar and erroneous ideas concerning the traveling attire of a countess. But one of the subordinates caught a glimpse as Corinne ascended the stairs, and his report electrified the community below stairs.

"It's extronary how the rich dos change the fashions," he said, confidentially. "Blue boots with red heels, and pearl silk——"

He indicated the articles that were of pearl silk.

"That's the forrin fashion," said a pretty housemaid, with a disdainful toss of her cap ribbons, and a slight elevation of a nose which had a natural tendency to elevate itself. "Hinglish ladies wouldn't do it. Short dresses never were proper."

"Ahem!" said the waiter, who also aspirated, "if Hinglish ladies kept their hevening dresses close round their throats they would reach a long way from their feet."

The housemaid retired from the argument, her face grew as red as the ribbons in her cap. Corinne did not feel at ease when the count conducted her to their apartments. She had taken the second false step, written a lie in calling herself the Countess Dunault, and outwardly compromised herself beyond redemption. She felt very keenly that her name would soon be a by-word among the servants McDonald had brought with him. They knew her. The beautiful equestrinne was proudly sensitive. It chafed her to the quick to think that a set of lacqueys should sport with her fair fame and jest coarsely about her after the manner of their kind. She looked a queenly being as she paced the room in angry shame, while McDonald, having thrown himself upon a couch, watched her with quiet exultation.

CHAPTER XXXII.

WOMAN'S WAR WITH HERSELF.

"Corinne," said McDonald, lowly, as the beautiful equestrienne paced the room impatiently.

The tone was irresistible to her; it subdued her anger, and her voice was supplicative as she turned towards him.

"Have mercy upon me, Simon, for your own sake as well as mine, or shame will come between us, and I shall leave you in despair. See how my conduct may be misconstrued."

"Not by me, Corinne, carissima," he said, caressively. "Sit here with me, and let me kiss that angry flush away. What have you to fear?—what shame to dread? not the tongues of our hirelings. They have a liberal master, and they know their places depend upon their discretion; not the world, we owe it nothing, and can afford to despise its conventionalities. You are the Countess Dunault, and the sound of that will silence all reports."

"I am not the countess yet. The servants know it."

"You are anything I tell them," and McDonald caressed her cheek carelessly; he was quieter now that she was in his power. "You are anything you like to be, Corinne, cara mia."

The old fatal influence was stealing over her once more as Simon drew her gently to the seat by his side. His half-insolent carelessness had always controlled her.

"We are rich, my countess; for so you will be when we reach France."

"When we reach France!" she echoed. "Are you mocking me, McDonald, or would you make me the guilty thing I feel already? When we reach France! Why, to travel with you unwedded till then would sink me irretrievably in shame."

"You traveled with George Gambert, carissima"—and still gravely nonchalant he smiled at her—"and there is no irretrievable shame upon you yet. You surely would not, for the sake of a conventionalism, have me risk my liberty and life by stating my real or assumed name in the course of a public ceremony in England? Is this your love, Corinne—a love which is nothing till a piece of semi-legal formality has been complied with?"

When he began to be reproachful, she was dumb.

"I trust all to you, Simon. See you do not break that trust, or we had better have never been born."

"Hush, beautiful tigress!—to look like that, and speak in such a tone to me. The servants shall be dismissed in the morning."

"Not Madelen."

"Keep her if you wish to."

"We can trust her; I am sure we can."

"Women know each other best," he said, veiling a sneer; "and so that my love, my bride, is glad, I care nothing. I can tell you, Corinne, that some few hours ago I thought we should be parted for ever."

"How?"

He told her the substance of his interview with O'Neil, suppressing only that gentleman's stinging bits of truth uttered in reference to Simon's character. Corinne watched him seriously during the recital. When he had finished she laid her hand upon his, and fixed him with a steady, unwavering glance. It troubled him. Her voice, musical, rich and calm; her words, distinctly spoken and unmistakable in meaning, troubled him more.

"Simon," she said, "I have cast my fate with yours, and while you love me I shall never have a regret. You know how dear you were to me when we were younger; and if I cared for you then, how much more must I care for you now? I have money, and, should you be poor, it shall be yours willingly."

"Corinne——"

"Wait till I have done: there must be no misapprehension of the truth. Granted that my love has made me rash; granted that I am compromised; granted that I have even been lured into a snare (and it would be hard, indeed, to think the only man I ever really loved had lured me into one), I am still what I have always been—true to myself. I wish to say frankly that there is something in you that I do not like—a levity, a want of reverence, a license that I feel is a danger to me. I knew you were a reckless roue, holding a woman's honor in light esteem. Do not seek to be so with me. At the first symptom I should be what you have said—a tigress: a beautiful tigress, if you like."

She threw her cloak aside, knelt on one knee, and still clasping his right hand, placed the other on his shoulder.

"But if you are to me a true and honorable gentleman, giving to me a true and honorable love, respecting me the more for the very recklessness of faith which has placed me so hopelessly at your mercy, you have a devoted woman who will cling to you to the end. I could share a bed of straw, a crust of bread, and still be rich, and more than rich, if you were so that I could always keep the old dream in my soul."

"My beautiful brave girl," he said, repressing his kindling fervor, "I will be anything you wish, so that you shall not doubt or think me less than true and honorable. If you think yourself compromised, I will defy the worst danger to make your fair fame spotless."

"No; I care nothing for the world; you are my world now. Keep me enshrined as I have you, where all is best and purest within me, and strangers may cover me in black obloquy, and I shall not care; and so I trust you, Simon; and, till we are safe from your foes, let me be a sister to you; love me purely, cherish me with your better nature—we shall be happier."

"Aye," he thought, "if the sateless devil were not in my soul, impelling me to your destruction, if I die a thousand deaths for it."

He strained her to him in a close embrace, and rose.

"As a sister," he said, "till—"

"Till we reach France."

Her lithe form, quite uncloaked, glided through the curtains from his view.

"Till time and opportunity give me a chance to talk you out of that mixed matter of fact and poetical philosophy," he muttered, smiling darkly. "Till we reach France—bah! I have always shirked the dull, deadening tie, and I shall not submit to it now, even for your sake, my magnificent Corinne."

The equestrienne found Madelen awaiting her. The poor French girl had been weeping sadly for little Alice.

"Madelen," said Corinne, "come here."

The girl rose in wonder, and smiled through her tears at the beauty of her new mistress. Corinne threw herself into her arms, and clung to her as if to a refuge.

"Madelen," she said, with a simple pathos that moved the impassioned French girl's quick emotions, "never leave me till we reach France. Promise me, Madelen, dear."

"I will never leave you, madame, but why?"

"Oh, Madelen, I have done wrong in coming with him, but the fault was not mine. I love him, Madelen, and if I were tempted I might forget to pray, but there is strength in sympathy, in confidence, and if you are always here—"

Madelen kissed her mistress warmly. She honored her for her truthfulness; the slender girlish attendant took a womanly dignity by the force of her position.

"I know," she said, "it is sad to love too well, and men are cruel in their passion."

Corinne sighed bitterly. She felt singularly desolate away from George Gambert. She sat before the fire with her arm round Madelen's neck, and her reverie was unbroken till the time-piece, tinkling half an hour before three, roused her.

"We shall have to alter some of your dresses for me," she said, looking at her own superb limbs with a sense of shame never felt before. "I must not see the count again like this—it is not wise."

CHAPTER XXXIII.

GEORGE GAMBERT'S DESPAIR.

When Gambert went back to the hippodrome and heard what had taken place, he could not easily realise the truth. He heard the tidings from the prompter, who recounted the scene between McDonald and Corinne in the arena and how the former had borne her away.

"In his traveling carriage?" repeated Gambert in surprise. "Surely he has not gone; no, he cannot have gone, for Corinne is with him, but what he wanted with his carriage I do not know."

O'Neil's heart smote him. He had turned his precautions against the very man in whose behalf he had used them.

"I did it for the best," he said, regretfully, "for I knew the traitor's purpose, and thought to save you from this misery."

Gambert's agitation grew intense. They were in Corinne's dressing-room, and the lion-tamer was gazing in a bewildered manner at her dress, the dark velvet bodice and plain silk skirt in which she looked so regal when dressed for the brougham.

"What do you mean?" he asked.

O'Neil told him what he had heard and witnessed. Gambert could scarcely let him proceed to the end, but broke out hoarsely,

"It cannot be true. Why she left me with a kiss upon my cheek and spoke the softest and sweetest words I ever heard her speak. That was only just before I began my scene, and I think her very tenderness unnerved me. It cannot be true."

"I am afraid it is, my poor friend; it is a sad and solemn fact what I have said, a sad and solemn fact I should have kept from your knowledge had not this wretched catastrophe happened."

"If it be true," said Gambert, brokenly, "I wish you had left me to the lion, for death would have been more merciful than this. My old friend Mac a traitor, and Corinne a creature worse than I can name. I will not believe it till the proof leaves no room for doubt."

"He was a rascal always," said O'Neil, "and I wonder that you ever called him friend."

"Let us go to the hotel," interrupted Gambert. "I am doubting her without cause, perhaps, and I shall be sorry."

O'Neil hoped mentally he might have cause for such sorrow, but the truth was clear to him; the treacherous wretch had taken advantage of the accident for his own purpose.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

GAMBERT'S DESPAIR.

Gambert made for the hotel. He did not question his first informant too minutely; he was faithful to the faithless, and was careful that her name should not be blackened sooner than it would be when all was known. The young Irishman sank for the time his solicitude for little Alice in his sympathy for the lion tamer, who with his own sorrow gnawing at his vitals was besieged on every side, at every step he took, by a crowd of idle or interested questioners.

Rumor had already been industriously at work, and the lady of the hundred tongues had not made the least of the truth. Many who came after the occurrence evidently thought to see the building on fire or in ruins. One report circulated and believed in was, that a cage of wild beasts—a complete zoological collection—had broken loose and mangled a multitude. Another, that the hippodrome had fallen and buried the audience. Every conceivable and inconceivable perversion of the facts was made, and questions were showered thick and fast upon George Gambert.

The hotel was in a state of siege. The latest report was that the lions had eaten their exhibitor, and popular credulity having fastened upon so striking a bit of the terrible, would not resign it easily. When people have made up their minds, and settled down to a belief, they do not care to be undeceived, so many heads were shaken sagely when Gambert appeared on the balcony to satisfy a clamorous demand to see him. One rumor being so conclusively shattered it did not take the sensation mongers long to start another. The lion had devoured Corinne; the beautiful equestrienne was gone.

And Corinne was shouted for. George Gambert shivered at the name. To satisfy the populace he went to the balcony once more, and assured his friends that their favorite was safe. She would reappear before them soon, he said, the lions had not touched her.

"Better if they had," he said to himself. "They could but have killed; the human wolf will do worse."

When hope was quite gone, when there could no longer be a doubt that Corinne had left him, and in a time that there was need of all the consolation a woman's gentle sympathy would have been to him, George Gambert went to Corinne's boudoir and bowed his haggard face in his hands.

The man was stricken bitterly, it was such a crushing blow to faith, to hope, and love; so swift and heavy a shock to the keen and sensitive tenderness of a powerful nature; it struck the garnered affection of a lifetime, and surely a woman's foot had never trodden a fair shrine into dust so ruthlessly before. Gambert gave a great stifled sob of desolation as he gazed at the familiar things that reminded him of Corinne. They were like so many relics of a wreck, all that was left him of his broken dream.

The tears he let fall slowly—large, burning soul drops, wrung from him in agony—were no shame to his manhood. Could he not have wept he must have died; the thick tide of emotion choking to his throat would have suffocated his heart.

"Had she but told me," he said, huskily, "said that she found she could no longer love me, I should have got resigned to it in time; it would have been hard, but not so hard as this. I would have sacrificed more for her than she could ask, even to the giving her to another, if it were for her happiness; but to feed me with sweet hopes, charm me with the witchery of her tenderness, and give me caresses with the thought of falsity in her heart, and then leave me at a time when even a dog would cling to its master with double fidelity! I wish I could think of her in anger, but I cannot, I am too desolate for that."

He picked up a glove; it yet retained the shape of her delicate hand, and was fragrant with the soft odor of a quiet perfume; she had worn it in the morning, and he could fancy it yet warm; it was an impulse sorrowfully loving that made him put it in his breast. As yet this almost mute heart-ache of despair absorbed him; he had thought only of the woman he had lost, not of the man who had taken her away.

Now he began to reflect on McDonald's duplicity, the cold-blooded, heartless scoundrelism which he had masked under the aspect of a friend. Gambert was very simple-hearted in some respects; his own conduct was guided by his principles, and they were noble. He had a generous fault; he measured his fellows by his own standard, and was, therefore, frequently deceived.

He left the boudoir as haggard and despairing as he had entered, but the ashen hue of his brown cheek was not all the effect of grief. The strong yearning for revenge was growing into conquerless desire. No malediction, no word of hate or oath of retribution passed his lips; his purpose was the more terrible that it was engendered silently.

What remained to be done in Drocburn was done with calm, methodical attention, and not one with whom he conversed saw on his face a sign of the suffering within. He was pale, but his pallor was the result of excitement. He made careful inquiries as to the extent of the injuries done during the panic, and found that there were numerous casualties, but no loss of life. To those who were in need he gave handsome compensation, and left a cheque with Mr. Bertram to defray any other expense or claim that might arise. He left the company in charge of his stage manager, instructed him as to his route and the performances, and paid a month's salary in advance. When these things were done he felt he could devote himself to his task. He went deliberately forth with a fixed intention to kill the traitor who had wronged him, wherever and whenever they met. He said so to O'Neil, and O'Neil saw it was a resolution he would keep.

"Give a thought to the consequences," said the young Irishman. "Slow and quiet revenge is better than a rash blow—a reckless deed of violence."

"I shall kill him," said Gambert, with unalterable determination, "and before her sight, if I have the chance. It is useless to reason with me. The man must die, and I am his fated slayer. I shall not be able to think of the consequences till I have done it."

"The law will not spare you," said O'Neil, "in spite of the strong provocation that more than justifies your intention; but why not be revenged as surely without sacrificing a life too good to be cast away on such a worthless brute?"

"How could it be done?"

"Hunt him down. I will help you; for I show no mercy to the man who deceives me more than once. Hunt him down; tear him even from her arms, and drag him to justice. Say, 'This is Simon McDonald, the forger, the escaped convict, the incendiary and the homicide.' There was some powerful influence at work to shelter him while he remained in seclusion on Charnet Heath, but his protector is dead."

"And what would be his fate?"

"The hulks for life, should he escape the gallows."

"It would not be like killing him myself," said Gambert.

"But then your own life."

"What there is left of it is nothing. I shall never be myself again. Except for my sorrow and the longing for revenge, my senses have died. I seem impelled by a power not my own; to seek McDonald out and slay him is a mania. When I have accomplished that I may change."

"And Corinne?"

"I cannot hurt her," he said, his face working with anguished tenderness. "I did think I could, but I cannot. If I could make you understand how much I have loved her, you would not wonder at me."

O'Neil pressed his hand. He felt for him deeply. He could see the world of racking torture beneath the other's iron quietude; and he mentally registered a promise that should the traitor escape George Gambert, it should not be long before retribution overtook him.

"And now tell me what you have heard concerning the child," Gambert said, as calmly as though they had previously been discussing some ordinary topic of conversation.

"Enough to satisfy me that she lives," responded O'Neil, "and that the man who took her away is Baptiste Jaconet, your late grotesque."

"But he is missing."

"I can understand that very well indeed," smiled O'Neil. "He has a prisoner worth keeping."

"I cannot see his motive."

"I can. Monsieur Baptiste Jaconet and I am not entirely strangers; and I am sure he must in some manner have gained an inkling of the child's history; but I shall find him. When do you go from here?"

"At once."

"And which road do you take? I too leave at once."

"The way they went," said Gambert, grimly.

"That would be towards the metropolis. It is a singular truth that people seeking safety in flight from a provincial town invariably start for London. Like feathers, they hover round the flame that is soon to scorch them. We will go together as far as we may."

"With such pleasure as I can feel, we will. I am glad we have met, but I would it had been under happier auspices."

"We have met in time of gloom," said O'Neil. "The sunlight of dawn is to come. Let me give you an honest opinion."

"Concerning whom?"

"Corinne."

Gambert bowed.

"Whatever temptation may have induced her to go with him," said O'Neil, emphatically, "she will never willingly be otherwise than a true and guiltless woman. Her infatuation may lead to indiscretion, never to dishonor."

"I thank you for the poor girl's sake," said Gambert, sombrely; "but her fair fame will be smirched, her soul irremediably tainted. I know McDonald well enough to feel assured she cannot long remain unsullied with him."

"We shall see. I adhere to my belief. If you find her unwedded, you will find her pure as she is now, unless treachery or force have been used."

"Do not let us dwell upon it."

O'Neil said no more. The two left Drocburn together—Gambert to find the track of McDonald, O'Neil to follow out his course—pick up link by link a chain that was to coil and rivet round the destroyer, and teach the Chevalier de Buradoc what a bitter, tireless foe he had in the sin phantom—the avenger.

CHAPTER XXXV.

MR. PENTLAND'S VISITOR.

The departure of Lady Leonora from Charnett left Mr. Pentland in much perplexity; her intended course of action was a mystery he could not solve, and in her absence he knew all his legal skill would be needed to defend her child's inheritance. He did not attempt to deny even to himself that the case presented features of unusual difficulty; to underrate the power of an enemy was not one of his failings, and the Chevalier certainly had him at a disadvantage. True, he held the Chevalier at bay, so far that he could not damage his character, brand him with the deep disgrace of illegitimacy, but it would serve no purpose beneficial to the lady, since he could not prove her right, and he knew with what keen and sensitive shame she shrank from aught that would slur the memory of her husband.

Pentland was prepared to find that Uxley and his client Michael would not be slow to follow up the advantage they knew their treacherous crimes had gained them; he pondered deeply how he should best meet them and fulfil his promise to the self-exiled lady.

"It is so palpable, that to denounce them would be to jeopardise the child," he soliloquised, "and I have no proof against them save such as they could easily refute; my case, if stated in open court, would seem a tissue of romance. I need powerful aid, some one who has mastered the dark intricacies," so he was thinking when his managing clerk entered to say a gentleman desired to see him.

"A stranger?" interrogated Pentland.

"Quite a stranger," responded the clerk. "A Mr. Alfred Hewbert."

Pentland was in no mood to see a new client, and his first impulse was to refer him to his partner, Snell.

"He mentioned you particularly," said the clerk, "and I think I would see him."

The speaker was an old faithful servant, and could venture to make a suggestion.

"Why?" said Pentland.

"He looks a gentleman who has important business."

"Then show him in."

The clerk retired. Mr. Hewbert entered. His fair frank face, and quiet grace of manner prepossessed Pentland in his favor. He received him courteously. The artist took a seat.

"You want help," he said, as though he interpreted the lawyer's thoughts, and was acquainted with his trouble, "advice and information in reference to the Charnett case."

The solicitor was on his guard instantly.

"This man," he thought, "may be an emissary from the Chevalier."

The artist smiled.

"I am a friend," he said, "and not a scout from the foe."

Instinctively the lawyer began to study his visitor. He saw in him a quickness of perception, a power to see the workings of the soul by the demotement in the eye and face that would make him either a dangerous antagonist or a powerful ally.

"Prove that," he said, "and I shall be very grateful."

"Take my word for it, Mr. Pentland, and if you can imagine a truthful purpose, you will see it in me. Your trouble is about the Chevalier, or rather Michael Ewrick, for they are one."

Pentland grew reassured.

"The man who so openly unmasks the enemy," he said, "can be no friend to him."

"A friend!" and the artist's bitter laugh chilled Pentland by its depth of hatred; "one who will hunt him to his doom, track his every step, destroy his every hope, and crush him into nothingness at last. Such is my friendship, Mr. Pentland."

"Then you will help me?"

"To the utmost. And now let confidence begin. I can trust you, and you have yet to see whether you can confide in me. Shall I commence?"

The lawyer inclined his head.

"Thirteen months ago," said Hewbert, "I went to Charnett in my present guise, as Alfred Hewbert, the artist. I thought to find the Chevalier there, for I knew he had begun his work. I can add another dark page to the history you already know. Up to the time I mention Earl Robert Lois was a hale old man in vigorous health; he began to sicken suddenly, drooped, wasted away."

CHAPTER XXXVI.

O'NEIL AND PENTLAND CONTINUE THEIR CONVERSATION.

"Grief for his son did much," said O'Neil to Pentland. "Sorrow crept into his heart, but insidnous treacherous death was stealing into his veins; his disease was inscrutable, it baffled his physicians, was a mystery to Doctor Hamilton."

"It was."

"Robert, Earl Lois, was slowly poisoned," said Hewbert, solemnly, "and he would have died before he did had I not saved him."

"How?"

"I told the stud groom, James Bingham, my suspicions, recommended him to the physician then in attendance, Doctor Hamilton's colleague, and from that time it was Bingham and not Stephen Lester who attended on the earl."

The Ludgate lawyer listened with growing interest: he had not heard this before.

"If you knew this," he said, "why did you not denounce the murderer?"

"Aye, there comes the question which might be asked and must bear throughout the whole tragic course. The crimes began, as they have been continued, with devilish subtlety and devilish daring. The poison Lester administered was a deadly distillation that baffled analysis and left no trace. Chemistry is not a faultless science."

"But surely they were means of bringing the criminal to justice?"

"Doctor Hamilton's colleague was a Frenchman, as you may remember," said Hewbert, "a man of wondrous science, and he had a special interest in his patient's life. He could not save him. No skill could eradicate the fatal venom once instilled; no skill could prove its existence."

"Do you speak on certainty as to the poisoning?"

"On moral certainty. I could have sworn, but had no possibility of proving what I knew. My suspicions, imparted to the French doctor, coincided with his own. And so long as he remained to within a month of Earl Robert's death he took measures to counteract the influence of the drug, acting on the supposition that it was still being administered from time to time."

FRANK QUEEN, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR,
No. 22 Spruce street, New York.

To Correspondents.

BOAT PULLER.—Fred. Dierst and Fred. Wolfe, whom Hamill has challenged to row him two five mile races on the 23d and 20th of May, respectively, are both prominent Pittsburgh oarsmen, although they have never pulled in any other waters. Hamill rowed his first scull race with Wolfe in the fall of 1859, defeating him; he also beat him on August 4th and 18th, 1860—all three miles distance. Dierst is a very muscular young man and a skillful oarsman and gymnast, whose friends have frequently talked of matching him against Jimmy, but for some reason they have so far failed to put the matter in proper shape.

EUREKA, East Cambridge.—He could leave the club in question—quit it entirely—and, becoming a member of another club, could play in matches with the latter after he had been a legitimate member of the latter club for thirty days immediately prior to the playing of the match he takes part in. This only applies to clubs belonging to the association. In matches between one association club and one not a member thereof, it would be immaterial when he joined or whether he was a member of one or two clubs or not.

MANY SUBSCRIBERS.—We find on referring to the report of the race between Flora Temple and George M. Patchen in the CLIPPER, that June 6th, 1860, that it is erroneously stated to be to wagon, instead of harness, and this led to the perpetration of the mistake in the summary of Flora's performances of March 31st, 1866. You have evidently bet in good faith, in ignorance of the existence of the above mentioned error, and we would recommend the stakes in both wagers to be drawn.

R. AND P., Williamsburgh.—"1. At cribbage, R plays a tray, B a six, P a four, F a five and R a tray; can R take four for a sequence? 2. B plays a four, P a four, F a deuce, R a five, B a tray, scoring four, P has no card, and F plays another deuce, can he take a sequence of four? 3. If A bets one dollar, what difference in money does it make to him whether he wins or loses?".....1. Yes. 2. No. 3. Two dollars.

READER OF CLIPPER, San Francisco, Cal.—"Can a player run or make a base on a called ball? For example, a player has reached his 2d base, he starts for his 3d, at the same time the pitcher delivers the ball to the batsman. The umpire calls one or two balls. Can the player run to his third, or is he compelled to return to his second?".....He can run his base and is not compelled.

ACE OF TRUMPS, Schenectady.—1. A good oarsman in a shell boat could not beat a good runner on level ground, 600 yards, the winner to run 300 yards and turn a stake and run back—the oarsman to pull 300 yards, turn a stake and pull back. 2. 1 mile and an eighth by Biren in 7 minutes 7 seconds; 2 miles by Wards, 13:53; 3 miles by Hamill, 22:27; 5 miles by Ward, 35:10.

PETE JENKINS, Boston.—1. Philo Nathans is with the European Circus. 2. Wm. Kincade, Lee Powell and James Reynolds are all playing clown with Geo. F. Bailey & Co.'s Circus and Menagerie. 3. Shappee and Whitney are with Bailey's Circus. 4. You will have several circus companies in your city this summer. L. B. Lent's New York Circus will be among the list.

G. W. B.—1. J. Withers is still traveling with Skiff & Gaylord's Minstrels. He is a cornet player. 2. He is considered a first class Ethiopian comedian. 3. Cannot say who is the original of the character. 4. Miss Blanche Chapman, formerly of the New Bowery, is at present in Williamsburgh, L. I., at Edwards' Opera House.

CONSTANT READER, Chicago.—If you possess talent of a fair order, you might obtain a chance with some good company, and then you could work your way up; you will no doubt find it a rough road at the beginning, but ambition and perseverance may carry you through successfully.

J. A. F., Zanesville, O.—"Can a person be a member of two base ball clubs at the same time and participate in any match game?".....He cannot play in a match between two association clubs (State or National) but it makes no difference in a match between outside clubs.

E. J. T., New Haven.—1. Van Amburgh was called the "King of Lion Tamers." 2. He died in Philadelphia, Nov. 29, 1865. 3. It is difficult to say who is the best magician. 4. You can procure anything in the magician line from Anderson & Stone, 209 Centre street, this city.

MARTIN M. KLOPP.—The circumstances narrated by you absolve you from the necessity of declaring your intentions, but you must go and get out your final papers from some one of the courts, which you can do at once if you so desire.

R. R. W., St. Joseph, Mo.—1. Morrissey and Heenan fought Oct. 20, 1858. 2. It was after his fight with Tom Sayers that Heenar, Jones and others traveled, giving exhibitions, and not between Oct., 1858, and April, 1859.

STICK IN THE MUD, Pepperville.—1. We have no recollection of John C. Heenan residing in the "Puke" State, as you call it. 2. The CLIPPER goes to press on Monday night. 3. There are nine or ten performers in the company.

GRAY, JR., Providence.—1. The Scotia, of the Cunard Line, the City of Paris, of the Inman Line, and the French steamer Periere, have all made the passage from here to Europe under nine days. 2. The Great Eastern has not made the fastest time.

LONE STAR, Anderson, Ind.—1. Yes. 2. Unless the umpire calls foul the striker must run for the first base when he hits the ball. He was out. 3. There is no appeal from the decision of an umpire.

W. B. D., Hudson City.—1. Lotta was born in this city, Nov. 7, 1847. First appeared in public at eight years of age, as a vocalist in California. 2. They are both living, but we cannot locate them at present.

ENQUIRER.—Ristori receives a larger fixed salary from managers in this country than was ever before paid any single artist or company. Two thousand dollars per night is what the Western managers have been paying Gran.

E. H. W., Richmond, Ind.—1. We cannot inform you anything relative to Mr. D. Lacy. 2. Dinks and Mayhew on Dogs can be had of W. C. Wemyss, 575 Broadway, this city.

J. M., Brookline, Mass.—1. The dealer has that privilege with some players. 2. Morrissey retired, and thus gave up all claim to the championship.

C., Haverhill.—Some of our advertisers may be able to accommodate you; we do not have time to make purchases for correspondents.

G. W. H., Haverhill, Mass.—If you charge for admission to see your performances, you must pay a State license, and two per cent on the gross receipts.

COCKER, Boston.—Give her an emetic of salt and water the day before going out shooting. Her case, however, is an almost hopeless one, as far as a perfect cure is concerned.

M. E., Staten Island.—"In a game of forty-fives, does the ace of hearts call for a heart when hearts are not trumps, and the opponent has no trump?".....Yes.

THOS. H. RINKER, Mt. Airy, Pa.—1. We have mailed you all the numbers you desire except No. 2, Vol. 15, which is out of print. 2. No.

E. G. L., Philadelphia.—We know of no way by which you can overcome the difficulty in the absence of any international copyright law.

J. K. W., Millican, Texas.—There being no rules, custom must decide the dispute; the three 40s take the two prizes, and throw for choice.

J. M.—Tom Hyer and Country McCluskey fought together, but it was a sort of impromptu, without rope and stakes, and for no money, we believe.

AN OLD READER, Alleghany City.—You will have to be in Cleveland May 6th, to get the "tip," as the men toss for choice on that day.

N. C. F.—We sent your letter to the point you requested, but cannot recollect the name of the town.

JUNIOR.—1. Yes, Lippman. 2. None. 3. No, unless in Beadle's Books. 4. Yes.

W. McC., Bangor, Me.—Address Samuel Sothern, No. 42 Scammel street, N. Y.

SUBSCRIBER, Dayton, O.—We have no knowledge of any such person as Featherstone, a prize fighter.

T. KNODLE, Sharpsburg, Ind.—$1.25 for three months subscription.

ROYAL PEELER, Norfolk, Va.—The Peeler should back up his challenge with a deposit.

CLIPPER BOY, Trenton, N. J.—A wins the wager, as their engagement was in progress at the time.

GAME COCK, South Boston.—B has no claim to the forfeit, as A was not bound to make the match for more than $25.

OIL CITY.—We never heard of a dog killing rats at the rate of one second each.

FRISCO.—1. See our Ring Department for the fight and "who Blackey is."

J. B. S., Washington.—We never heard of his doing anything in the P. R.

GOTHAM.—The penalty for the player exposing his cards is, that any and every card exposed may be called by the opponents.

BORDER.—The Lindale House was not only the largest in the United States, but in the world.

J. AND L., Trenton.—Your statement is not sufficiently plain. J had no right to use a rest in shooting.

INVALID.—They have given up that idea. See notice in City Summary.

ST. JOE.—There is no such movement here, but there is a statue in 14th street, Union Square.

MASON & METZGER, Chicago.—Too late to change this week, but all right for next.

VETO, Washington.—There are no pictures of Young Barney Aaron in the market.

J. T. L., Franklin, Conn.—In throwing raffles, two fours and a six beat two fives and a deuce.

NEW YORK.—George M. Patchen died May 1st, 1864, at John J. Speidker's, Union Course, L. I.

BLUE JERSEY.—The player on the left of the dealer has the lead.

W. H. R.—We already have a correspondent in that "village."

HUGO.—She has never been married. About 34 years of age.

ROVER, Philadelphia.—We do not know the lady's maiden name.

G. M. C., Baltimore.—He is with French's Circus, out West.

NOODENS, Baltimore.—They leave for Europe this week.

G. B., Albany.—Mace was born in 1831—Brettle in 1833.

BOX 119.—We make a discount of 20 per cent.

HAMLET, New Haven, Ct.—We can send you those numbers.

PONTOON.—It is Mr. Taylor, the banjo player.

T. J. B.—M. Jullien died March 14, 1860.

G. H. E., Johnstown.—The lady is about 35 years of age.

COCKATOO.—Such items will be acceptable.

G. A., Cleveland.—You had better write to some German paper

NONPARIEL.—All right.

R. W. F.—At last accounts he was in Cincinnati.

PERCY, Rochester.—Certainly. Come again.

JUMPING FROG.—Did you ever read Mark Twain's story of the celebrated jumping frog? If so, you have laughed most atrociously, we dare assert; if not, then let us advise you to get Mark's book, just published by C. H. Webb, 119 and 121 Nassau street, and for sale by the American News Company. This book not only tells the frog story, but a large number of others equally amusing. Get it by all means, and laugh heartily.

REGATTA AT PARIS.—We regret to learn that the United States will not be represented in the great regatta at Paris. Boston seemed to take a lively interest in the matter at first, but of late this feeling died out, apparently, and the matter ended for the statement is made in the public prints to the effect that for various reasons the "Collegians" would not take part in the proposed aquatic contest. We are sorry for this; and we are somewhat surprised that New York has not taken more interest in the affair. Even now it is not too late to send a crew to Paris, although they would be too late to enter for the regatta; they could, however, challenge the winners, and, if successful, gain all the eclat that might be gained in the regatta. A crew can be formed in this city, if the people desire to be represented at Paris. If a few public-spirited individuals were to take this matter in hand, it is certain that the necessary funds could be raised without much difficulty. We are ready with our purse and paper to aid in sending out an American crew.

UNFORTUNATE.—The gentleman who runs the weather machine for the Tribune is unfortunate in his prognostications. On several occasions recently he said that there would be no rain here for the first eighteen hours of certain days; before half the number of hours had gone by rain fell in these parts, and very wet rain at that. It was only this (Monday) morning that the gentleman said in his weather report in "H. G.'s" paper—"It will not rain in this city, or for thirty miles around it, for the first eighteen hours of this day" (Monday.) Thoughtlessly, we placed confidence in "H. G.'s" weather engineer, although clouds were over us, and came down town without an umbrella. Before we got half way down dropped the rain, and wet we are. Some of the gentleman's machinery must be out of order, or his predictions would be more correct. Will he please see to it?

SHAD, OH!—We like shad, good shad, and we expect to have a good deal of comfort in settling accounts with three luscious-looking shad now staring at us as we write. These delicious fishes were formerly inhabitants of the Connecticut River, but by some curious hocus pocus are now taking up their quarters in our sanctum, previous to undergoing the humane operation of a broil. For this trio of lovely shad we are indebted to the thoughtfulness of Mr. Wm. H. Meschette, of No. 310 and 311 Washington fish market, this city. May he never know what it is to be without the first shad of the season, and may he sell out just as fast as he can catch them.

THE OLD GUARD.—This organization, composed of members of the Hibernia Fire Engine Company, of Philadelphia, announce their second annual ball for Thursday evening, May 2d, at Musical Fund Hall. Our Old Guard-ian friends will please accept our thanks for an invitation to join in the festivities.

A BUST.—Mr. Joseph Ames, of Boston, has just finished a bust of Abraham Lincoln. "Our Jim," whose aims appear to be directed in another channel, has just completed a bust which he has been on for three weeks past.

GOOD OLD AGE.—Mrs. Love, of Butler county, Indiana, has reached the age of 103 years. This is the most lasting Love we have ever heard of.

BILLIARDS.

A BOLD MOVEMENT FOR AN INTERNATIONAL CONTEST.

AMERICA vs. FRANCE AND ENGLAND.

Several attempts have been made on this side of the Atlantic to induce the billiard players of France and England to test their skill with the players of this country. All have failed, however, but through no fault of our players. The English champion, John Roberts, was in this country last year, and efforts were then made to match him against Joseph Dion, the latter being willing to play the English, French and American games, or even the push-barred four-ball game in place of the French. Roberts, however, would play only his own game (the English) and the push-barred four-ball game, which is as much his own as that of any other player in the world, and these two games he would only play on a table of a specified make, which table he well knew was objectionable to Dion. The upshot of Dion's challenge and Roberts' answer was—no match. Last week Dion's proposition was repeated substantially, but with certain alterations calculated to make it in all respects just and equitable. As it now stands, there is no escape for the English and French players. They must either play or make two humiliating acknowledgements—first, that the American player dare do more than they; and second, that his willingness to play for it, under conditions, too, that must be held, if disadvantageous to either of the three parties, to be against the American himself, is almost equal to his winning the championship of the world. The proposition itself, and the incidents which led to it, are these:—

While the games between William Gray and Frederick Foulkes were in progress at the Thirteenth street racket court, on Tuesday afternoon April 23, Mr. Michael Phelan, who was an interested spectator of the play, and, though not having a penny at issue, had his amor patria touched by the jubilant remarks of the supporters of the victorious English racket champion, made a proposition which, if fully acted upon, will bring about a series of billiard contests that must throw completely into the shade all previous exploits of master-players. Prefacing his proposition with the remark that, though England can beat America at rackets, she cannot beat our billiard players, Mr. Phelan offered to match Joseph Dion, the American billiard champion, against John Roberts, the English champion; one American game, one English game and one French game to be played, all three on the standard table and with the standard balls of their respective countries. The English three-ball winning and losing hazard being Roberts' chosen game, and the American four-ball carom game Dion's, the French, or neutral game is introduced as being necessary to determine the contest. The games to make three distinct matches, each for $5,000 in gold a side, or else form one grand match, the winner of a majority of games to take the entire sum staked, $30,000 in gold. The gentleman to whom this proposition was addressed, and who regards it favorably, will immediately upon his return to England submit it to Mr. Roberts. It may be as well to state that the proposition now put forth in his behalf is not confined to Roberts. It is open to the world, though Roberts, or Charles Burger, of Paris, being severally the acknowledged heads of the billiard profession in England and France, is preferred.

CHAMPIONSHIP OF AMERICA.—John McDevitt, having, it is said, secured the services of a competent mentor, intends to go into active training this week, with the double view of developing his outer man and beating Joseph Dion for the championship and $1,000. This match will come off at Montreal about June 10th. Dion has played twenty games this year, and will not be able to begin practice until he has his new room all to rights, which will not be until the latter part of May, unless he should have a table set up before hand; and this he had better do, as McDevitt feels quite confident that he will worry him, and, moreover, is able to do it; at least at that particular game.

EXHIBITION BY CYRILLE DION.—This player, brother to the American Champion, and himself the nominal champion of all Canada, is preparing for his contest with Crown for the Championship of the Provinces. Recently he visited St. Johnsbury, Vt., and played an exhibition game of 1,500 points, in the course of which he made runs of 190, 141, 123, 116, 111, 109 and 94, and averaged 24⅓. The day before he played a similar game at Rock Island, C. E., a full-size, four-pocket table being used. His average was 18⅓, and his best runs 254, 118, 114, 107, 101 and 99.

THE BILLIARD ROOMS in Carroll Hall, Baltimore, Md., were discovered to be on fire on the 28th ult. This was Nelms' establishment, we believe. We have not learned how much damage was done.

RACKETS.

MATCH FOR A TWO HUNDRED DOLLAR PURSE.

Immediately after the conclusion of the championship match between Gray and Foulkes, the members of the New York Club being desirous of witnessing another display of racketing skill offered a purse of $200 for the winner of a rubber match of 15 aces each between the above players. Gray won the first game, after tieing 13 each, and setting to 5 by a score of 5 to 2. Foulkes won the second, making 15 aces to Gray's 11; and Gray won the third by scoring 15 to 12.

A match for a purse of $25, best three in five, games between young Joseph Gray and James Moore, the marker at the New York Club Court, followed. Gray won the first and second games, scoring 15 aces to 8, and 15 to 14. In the third game they scored 14 each, and set the game to three, Moore winning by one ace. The fourth game was won by young Gray, who played with wonderful skill for so youthful a racketer, by a score of 15 aces to 9, thus winning the purse.

It is in contemplation to make another match for a good stake between the Champion Gray and Foulkes, the former giving the latter two hands to one, but conditional upon the match being the best five out of nine games, 15 aces each, and neither player to leave the Court until all the games are played. In the event of such match not being arranged, the Messrs. Gray and their backer and trainer, Mr. Watters, intend visiting Canada before returning home.

THE WORLD'S RACKET CHAMPION.—William Gray, late victor in the first of the World's Championship matches, played on the 22d and 23d of April, is to have a benefit at the New York Club's court, 53 and 55 West 13th street, near 6th avenue, on Tuesday afternoon, April 30th. Already a great number of tickets have been sold, the Hon. John Morrissey taking $100 worth alone, so that the stranger will not have cause to complain of his treatment while in this country. On the 27th ult., the four-handed match, Fred Foulkes and Wm. Devoe against the brothers Wm. and Jos. Gray, best two in three, was played, in which the American representatives won. After this the champion played some very fine games with a number of ambitious amateurs, giving them extra hands and aces. The trio—the Gray brothers and Mr. T. Watters—will remain at Louis McLeish's, 15 and 17 Crosby street, until they leave for Canada, from whence numerous invitations to visit have been received. All parties express themselves in the highest terms of their treatment in this city, and hope to have an opportunity of reciprocating in Erin's Isle on the occasion of the return match in July.

THE FOOT RACE BETWEEN THOMAS AND DAVIS.—This 100 yards match, said to be for $500 a side, didn't take place on the day appointed, nor yet the second day, although quite a large crowd was present both on Tuesday and Saturday. We are informed that it will come off positively on Tuesday afternoon, April 30th, at Finley's Half Mile Track, on the Bloomingdale Road.

A DOG FIGHT AT THE HUB.—Sam Turner and Harry Jennings met on Tuesday, April 23d, to decide between two 19lb dogs, which was the better dog, for $400. After fighting 2¼ hours without a turn, Jennings claimed a turn, which was given. Time being called Jennings' dog would not go from his corner, and Turner's was decided the winner.

THE RING.

FIGHTS TO COME.

APRIL —.—Charley Davis and Frank White, $250 a side, 110 lbs.
MAY 10.—Wm. Michael Davis and James Elliott, $500 a side, catch weight.
—.—Johnny Bernard and Frank Drew, $500 a side.
JUNE 8.—Sam Collyer and Barney Aaron, catch weight, $2,500 a side and the Light Weight Championship.
JULY 9.—Jimmy Elliott and Charley Gallagher, catch weight, $500 a side.

GEORGE ROOKE'S SECOND BENEFIT.

LIVELY WORK ALL ROUND, AND SOME EXCITING SETS-TO.

HOT WORK BETWEEN DWYER AND ROOKE.

ROOKE CHALLENGED BY BUTT RILEY FOR $1,000.

A fair attendance was present at Lincoln Hall on the 26th ult., and the majority of those not friendly disposed towards the beneficiaire, if actions and words at the close go to prove friendship. Owing to Rooke not circulating around, he couldn't expect men in public business to leave their business for the sake of putting money in his way, so that the bulk of those who patronized him were either strangers, or came to see the last set-to, which was expected and proved to be very warm. The City of Churches was very largely represented notwithstanding the "padding the hoof" to be done before reaching the "drink," to say nothing of the ground to get over when on t'other side. Of new faces we were glad to meet the gentlemanly Mike Smith, in times gone by one of the ablest and best in that line. The presence of ex-Alderman Reed, of the 22d, was something very unusual, but he appeared to enjoy himself right well at the expense of those "foolish enough to batter each other for others to laugh at," as some of the philosophers derisively speak of these affairs. Tom O'Donnell had to come and look at the wind-up, if nothing more, as also Tommy Burns, that unflinching, true sporting man. Con Foley, "almost quite well," had all hands congratulating him on his recovery, whilst Mart Crozier came in for a due share of observation. The Cast Iron Man wasn't there, although Tom Riley was, which may seem to Gillen "an odorous comparison," but such it is not, or two times isn't twice. There were some others, some "fly," some "flat" in such matters—talkers too, who "put in" unsolicited and in improper places; in fact, a little of all sorts and styles. The most of them came in at the door and paid "cash down," while not a few "kids" ran the risk of life and limb by climbing up the waterspouts and crawling in the windows, embryo Jack Sheppards every one of 'em. Tom the Boatman's absence (though not "a thing of beauty and joy forever" to Bill Tovee) seemed to be generally regretted, his geniality and flow of spirits always creating sport—a variety of reasons were attributed for his non-appearance, the principal one, that he was asked to dine with the Japanese Ambassadors and lost his way, although Glen Levitt is a powerful magnetizer, and is generally a sort of compass to Thomas when in strange places. There was no stage, as Rooke stated there would be—this, however, made no difference whatever, the hall being anything but crowded, and all could see from their respective stand or sitting down points. Tovee felt as frisky as a lamb's narrative, which he had a pretty good right to be, this being his natal day, thrice married, and 65 years of age, all on the 26th of April. People may well call him "Old Times Rocks," for he is an old timer. How many who read this will live to have a third wife?

Although going on for nine before the first couple were led forth, those present could well afford to wait rather than see the dirty-faced brigade of ragged boys intrude themselves where never wanted. Teddy McAuliffe and Bill Bennett, a couple of the right sort, started the ball and kept it rolling all the time with their "hit, stop, job and get away." Both were in fine spirits and felt like jumping around. Teddy took rougher chances with Bill than usual, and caught a few ear-warmers from the Met's right wing, but in the countering there was no advantage on either side. The slippery state of the floor spoilt some decidedly well intended visitations on both sides, but it was kept up for quite a while by the Old Man, who, knowing that sparrers were scarce, wanted to make it last. When finished, the up-town boys were loudly cheered.

Billy Kelly and Pete McGinnis were not long in taking the places of Teddy and Bill, and as Kelly hadn't showed for a number of recent benefits, the lookers on kept a sharp look out to see if he was going to say anything. He didn't wait a second hardly before venturing one of his peculiar swinging blows at the Sullivan-like mug of McGinnis, and got it there; on a second attempt he was likewise successful with his left fin, and for a time seemed to be walking away with "Pether," but we thought Billy was going a little too fast to last, and so it proved afterwards. When McGinnis settled down to his work he gave just as good as he took, and with remarkable agility; although scarcely moving his body at all, he would rattle away with both hands, and chased Kelly all around the ring, Billy's tactics at retreating being of no mean order. In a rally McGinnis' blows told most, and he succeeded in turning on the tap, a thing, however, not anything unusual, Kelly, who is very fleshy, bleeding somewhat easier than most people. Taken all through, they had a spirited thumping match and were properly applauded on retiring.

Billy Edwards and Patsy Tinney, of Brooklyn, came together as a sort of change off instead of Fox and Edwards. In doing so, it couldn't have proved any more exciting had Fox been in Tinney's boots, for Patsy is a "hummer," as the Brooklyn boys know right well. Edwards, who hasn't a superior at his size when taken at all points, didn't expect Tinney was going in for rough work, but this was his gait, and from the word go, with a jump like one of Ned Dickinson's Jersey chickens, he flew at Billy with both hands, pegging away like a good fellow, much to the admiration of Patsy's partizans. At first he did right well at this racket, and after the second round he got so many thumps, and such hard ones about the head, that he found the tables reversed, and became general receiver for the time being. Edwards aimed for the head, kept remarkably cool, and gave Tinney some staggerers with both hands, enough to make most young fellows want to play light—not so with Tinney, he wasn't to be stalled off, and stuck to his work like printer's ink, trying every way he knew how to knock the puff out of Billy, by his favorite body whacks. It was Wellington and Bonaparte over again, and will no doubt be renewed at some future day. Of course Tinney and Edwards got "thunders of applause."

Hill's Troupe was represented by a fiddler striking up an Ethiopian air for a song and dance, by Little Dick Hill, blacked up a la Johnny Allen, in which he gave good satisfaction, was called on for a second song, and also for a walk around. Mr. Daisy followed Dick with two rather hefty songs about the Excise Law, sparing nobody and mentioning the names of Head Super and other members of the Board in no flinching but complimentary terms. Daisy's second song suited the crowd, but not the officers. Harry Hill, though somewhat out of practice, gave his usual Indian club act afterwards.

Pat Cannon, the recent arrival, whom Paddy Keenan is ready to back to fight any man in America at catch weight for $500 a side, came on next, with Ed. Lowery, of Brooklyn, who some time ago fought a desperate battle with Billy Dwyer, of the same city. It looked big odds against Lowery, Cannon being a powerful, big made young fellow and a dangerous man to go near—it was "extra hazardous," also tedious to look at, the Big 'Un never leading off at all, and Lowery being very leary about it. When Ed. tried it, he jumped back about five feet, at which the crowd couldn't help laughing, at the same time admiring Lowery's judgment—he got there once in a while and took chances in a rally, but generally made it short. Cannon puts up well, appears to be a good hitter and stopper and is clever on his feet; he has never been properly tried in public since he came to the country; the more's the pity, for it's in him. It was expected for Pat Kelly to be there, and much regretted that he wasn't, to give Cannon a lively tussle and by this means draw him out. Lowery made out pretty well under the circumstances, and his re appearance on the boards was good for weak eyes.

Luke Gleason and Johnny Dwyer, brother to the Dwyer who sparred with Rooke, were very evenly matched. Johnny took more risks and didn't fight so careful as usual, and Gleason, with the heart of an Irish lion, was not to be denied whatever he undertook. Both are neat sparrers and at off-shots some neat stopping and hitting was done—in the rush Luke went after John double quick, but hadn't the strength to carry out his intentions, so that John felt pleased thereat and appeared to very good advantage.

Rocks, a rollicking, devil-may-care, stiff built young fellow, and Bull, another thick witted cove, got all over each other, Rocks waiting for nothing or nobody, but keeping on the go with both hands all the time. His style and good nature made it great fun for the gazers on, if not for Bull, who did better than many others could. Had Bull been a General he might, by just stepping aside the least bit, have had Rocks sprawling, or by steadying himself and keeping his ground, countered the Old Boy very often, but he did neither and so had to take it, giving whenever he could, as Rocks bored him to the limits every time. He was a great Rocks.

This over, the wind-up came round at last, and every one was glad when it did come, notwithstanding there was nothing to find fault with and all did well. It was getting late, and it is dry food in a room like Lincoln Hall, with its miserable gas lights, to sit for three hours waiting between times, and then watching two men trying (?) to hit till one's eyes get strained to bursting almost. It's worse than between the acts at a theatre, by long odds, and almost as bad as listening to a sermon on Hyperbolicism, or some such other thrilling subject. When Tovee advanced, followed by the lath-like six-footer, with the half-Indian looking Brooklynite bringing up the rear, the group was a characteristic one, and more attractive at that particular time than looking at a certain briny model artist performer go through the motions as she used to do in years agone for a mere song and what could be picked up afterwards. But that's neither here nor there. Old Tovee offered up thanks for Rooke, and after a very weak attempt on the part of one person to give George "three cheers," which he had all to himself, the Old Man introduced Billy Dwyer, of Brooklyn, and George Rooke, as about to finish the sports of the evening. From the crowding around to see this, and the pushing and jostling, it was self evident that everybody expected to see something not on the programme. They had scarcely put up before an outsider shouted, "You haven't got the Cast Iron Man to deal with now," followed by another requesting Dwyer to "knock his sanguinary cabase off," and such like "compliments of the season," which Rooke boyishly took notice of and replied to, thereby deadening what sympathy might have existed for him. A variety of reasons are alleged as to the cause of this feeling, which, if true, was not to be surprised at. While sparring for an opportunity to land, the "remarks" were kept up, and when they both let go, some of the wild fellows fairly screamed again, crazy to see Dwyer beat him if possible.

The immense advantages Rooke possessed in height and reach were not easily counterbalanced by the short, fat, stockey built Brooklyn man, and although with the best of intentions and a dogged determination Dwyer tried to put it on, he was generally met by the swivel-like, long drawn out left duke of the man who fought the Cast Iron Man (but neither one got any of the money), which was held straight out and kept working like the crank of an engine, and despite Billy's efforts to the contrary, Rooke would get there. After exchanging a few malicious hits, Dwyer, by a well timed and lucky move, got home a sousing right hander under Rooke's left arm, lifting him clean off his pins, and on coming down he fell flat on his junction. At this a simultaneous shout went up from the crowd, and with the most tremendous enthusiasm three rousing cheers were given for Billy Dwyer, who bore his honors very quietly, keeping his eye on Rooke all the time. When George got up, which he appeared to do with considerable difficulty, he limpingly stepped out and said he had twisted his knee and could spar no more. This made matters look very squally, every body jumping to their feet—some hollowing one thing, some another, until no one knew what would be the end. Amid the taunts of those who went to see him warmed, and broad hints as to his being afraid, etc., Rooke consented to go on, and such a "murthering" set-to we have seldom seen. Rooke, "jibed as to how his sprained leg was" instead of in an affectionately way, seemed to forgot all about it, or else "it come back again," as a celebrated oarsman said when cornered, for after that he did even better than before, his iron like left prop being impossible to stop and that he kept slogging away at Billy's nob, or rather Billy run at that half the time in his anxiety to get to him on the body, until after a tremendous bout while it lasted, by the advice of several officers it was stopped, Billy getting the worst of it as the fight progressed, but against great odds.

Immediately after this sensation and while the feeling yet ran high, Butt Riley stepped into the inclosure took off his cap and said that he would FIGHT ROOKE, COLLINS, OR ANY OTHER 140LB MAN IN THE COUNTRY, FOR $500 OR $1,000 A SIDE.

To this Rooke, stepping forward and shaking Riley by the hand, replied to the effect that his friends having started him in a new house, "he wouldn't fight anybody," so that the Cast Iron Man will have to look elsewhere for a match, and so will Butt Riley, unless Cast Iron can get backed against him at that weight. Collins fought Rooke at 140lb and is willing to fight him again at that weight, but anybody else will have to come to 136lb and he will do the same, at least so his challenge reads. We shall probably hear more from Butt Riley's great challenge, as it takes in a large number of pugs not tied down to any particular business.

THE BRITISH CHAMPIONSHIP FRAUD.

THE ENGLISHMAN RECEIVES THE STAKES WITHOUT A FIGHT.

A "SKIN GAME" PLAYED ON THE IRISH GIANT.

MORE "ENGLISH FAIR PLAY."

The great fight for the English Champion's Belt and £200 a side, between Ned O'Baldwin, of Waterford, Ireland, and Joe Wormald, of London, England, which was expected to take place in England on the 23d of April, was, for some reason or other, postponed until the 27th of April, but when that day came round, by some hocus pocus peculiar to the self-styled "lovers of fair play," as the Atlantic telegraph informs us, the men never met at all, but the Englishman was to be awarded the stakes. Read the cable news:

LONDON, Saturday, April 27, 1867.

The anxiously expected pugilistic event, the prize fight for £400 sterling and the champion's belt of England, which was to have taken place to-day, between Joe Wormaid and Ned O'Baldwin, the "Irish Giant," has not come off.

The men did not meet, and, consequently, there has not been a battle. O'Baldwin was not present this morning at the place appointed, which had been duly made known to him from the proper quarter in seasonable time.

His absence is accounted for by the statements of his friends and backers to the effect that he missed the train which left London bound in the direction of where the ring was to have been pitched.

The entire prize ring fraternity of the city are utterly disgusted because there has not been a fight.

Wormald will be awarded the stakes, and all the bets which were pending on the issue are declared void.

The championship of England and the belt are held in abeyance.

What think you of that? If the English P. R. championship matches are ever thought worth the waste of ink after this, we shall be very much mistaken, unless a change for the better takes place at once. Fraud and humbug will be the terms for all such affairs hereafter. We were prepared to hear of O'Baldwin being beaten out of it on the referee business, or in the breaking up of the ring if O'Baldwin looked like winning, but this giving up his £200 to Wormald without a fight is an entirely new way of doing business, if O'Baldwin was treated right in the matter. The reason is as simple as the alphabet—O'Baldwin being an Irishman, with the chances of winning the champion belt of England—neither the stakeholder, the press, or the public had any desire to risk his fighting Wormald, the odds being every way in his favor to pull it off successfully, and by this means the dreaded spectre of an Irishman being champion of England would become a reality. Think you, for a moment, that had Mace and Maraden, or any of their own school been fighting Wormald, instead of O'Baldwin, this would have been the result? If so, you are wrong. Oh, no: nationality was at stake. England's Ring reputation lay on that very battle, and if Ned had had a show he would, in all probability, have taken the conceit out of them. The Londoners, headed by their controlling organ, would put up with any thing but this. We are of those who believe it was never intended to risk Wormald's going in the ring with the gallant Irishman. Had Heenan or Coburn been in the place of Wormald, matched to fight O'Baldwin in England, who would have interfered? Nobody. Any other countryman but an Englishman could have got every show to get beat or beat the Giant—it was immaterial which. So we go. It is Heenan and Sayers, and Heenan and King all over again, only worse—with them, in all similar cases, it is win, tie or wrangle. If Wormald gets the stakes because O'Baldwin misses a particular train of cars, what about Joe Coburn when he went to the ground and Mace wasn't even in the country on the day of the fight? Did Coburn get the stakes? We guess not. Some may be able to distinguish the difference, but we cannot. The last time O'Baldwin fought, the mob would have killed him outright if it wasn't for fear of the after consequences, and as it was they broke in the ring, pelted him with bottles, sticks and stones—all because he beat one of the "school" whom they had no idea he could beat. It's a nice place and they are very nice people, give them their own way, but after that, good by, as far as London sporting men are concerned. In view of all these facts, is it to be wondered at that there is always such a feeling between the Irish people and England? It is so in everything where the two nations clash, and as long as it is so, and those having the power do not do right, it ever will be.

HOW COLLYER WAS RECEIVED IN THE QUAKER CITY.—Sam Collyer's benefit took place at Fox's American Theatre, Friday evening, April 26th, when the house was crowded to excess, a large proportion being composed of ladies, and even "standing room" was at a premium. Collyer appeared as "Young America" in the Crib Scene from "Tom and Jerry," when he exhibited the colors he intends to use in the coming match, and with Patrick Mealley (one of the expertest amateurs in Philadelphia), gave one of the most finished and artistic exhibitions of science that has, perhaps, ever been witnessed in the Quaker City, which was received with manifestations of delight and loud calls for a repetition. After the set-to, Collyer was presented with a Gold badge, the design being the badges of the 18th and 24th army corps combined, viz: a four pointed clover leaf with a heart in the centre, in the ranks of which he so nobly served his country during the late rebellion. The badge was beautifully engraved, and bore the following inscription: 'Presented to Sam'l Collyer, Light-Weight Champion of America, by his Philadelphia friends, April 26th, 1867." A neat silver medal, elegantly engraved, and bearing a suitable inscription, was also presented to each of his talented pupils, Masters Dan and Eddie. In the audience were a large number of prominent sports from New York, Brooklyn, Baltimore, Pittsburgh and elsewhere. Amongst others, Mike Henry and John Chapman of the City of Churches; John English and Jem Dunn, of Baltimore, and others of note. Although a comparative stranger heretofore in that city, Collyer has, during his present engagement, attracted large audiences, and by his gentlemanly deportment has made a host of warm friends, who now take a deeper interest in the pending contest between him and the equally renowned Barney Aaron for the championship.

THE ELLIOTT AND DAVIS MATCH FOR $1,000.—As the day of the fight between Bill Davis, the California Champion, and the well known Jimmy Elliott, approaches, the excitement attending it of course greatly increases. A few days only now remain for them to finish their work, as the battle comes off on Wednesday, May 8th. Davis' friends in Detroit, and he has made hosts of them during his short stay, are anxious to see him and judge of his improvement since under Mackey's hands. Such being the case, Davis has concluded to give an exhibition at Merrell Hall on Monday evening, May 6th, which will be but two days before the battle. His friends and backers will then have an opportunity of judging for themselves of his condition and abilities when in trim and to bet their greenbacks on his chances of success. The choice of fighting ground will also be settled that evening, after which there is nothing in the way to prevent this being, what is everywhere expected will be, a fair, manly fight of the jovial old days gone by style. Davis' kindness in sparring for his friends is well known, and we bespeak for him a crowded house and plenty of good talent, to make this the best exhibition yet given in the "City of the Straits." Johnny Mackey has a great many friends there and is a great favorite among the sporting community; they have seen him spar with Elliott and Gallagher, and now they wish to see him set-to with Davis.

OFF HAND SCRIMMAGE BETWEEN TWO UP TOWN LADS.—Bill Denning and Charley McCormick, a couple of Tenth avenue boys, having had a growl in a porter house on the night of Rooke's benefit, April 26th, they agreed to go and settle it in a fair, manly way the next morning, and, accordingly, at a very early hour the principals, and a few friends who had got wind of it, crossed from the foot of 63d street to the Powder dock

lege at the regatta. By taking three out of the present Harvard and counting one of the crew of the last Harvard, now in Paris, seven could be relied on and probably another might have been found somewhere. It would be a light crew, but that would be better for a short course. But now another difficulty arose. Could the undergraduates get leave of absence? It had been thought that this might be arranged, but at the faculty meeting on the evening of April 23d, it was voted inexpedient to grant the prayer of the petitioners. The plan of forming a crew was then reluctantly given up as a matter of necessity.

This places the chances of our taking part in the Regatta out of all calculation, as the entries have to be made by the 1st of May.

THE YALE COLLEGE BOYS AND THE BOATING SEASON.—The Yale College boating men are preparing for the coming races with Harvard College. Their University crew has been made up and has gone into training. W. A. Copp, of Grafton, who pulled the starboard stroke in the last regatta, will pull stroke in the coming race. He is said to be the most powerful man in college, and in fine condition for the contest. L. L. Palmer, of Stonington, Conn., will have the bow, and though Mr. Copp is the only one of the crew who has ever pulled in a University regatta, all have proven their skill and endurance in the harbor races at New Haven. McKay, the veteran boat builder, is now at work on a new University shell. The Yale Scientific crew have just gone into training, and expect a different result from last year when they again match oars with Harvard. The stroke, A. L. Palmer, of Stonington, Conn., and the bow, J. F. Whittelsey, of New Haven, are the same as last year. The Freshmen class of Yale, the only one that has a separate boating organization, are talking of challenging Harvard, which, if accepted, will bring three rival college crews to the University regatta of 1867, and make it one of more than usual interest and brilliancy.

ANOTHER YACHTING VENTURE.—The result of the great ocean race between the yachts Henrietta, Vesta and Fleetwing, and the successful voyage of the diminutive craft Red, White and Blue across the broad Atlantic, has stirred up a spirit of emulation in the breasts of Uncle Sam's offspring everywhere and we hear of several similar enterprises as in contemplation. The latest and most important undertaking of this kind was to have been inaugurated on the Pacific coast, on March 18th, by Messrs. John Swann and B. W. Johnson, who, accompanied by a single seaman and a canine critter as boatswain, were to sail from Frisco on that date, in the yacht Flyaway, for Victoria, Vancouver's Island. This little vessel was built by Samuel Merritt, of Maine, and taken to Frisco on the deck of a clipper. She is built of white oak, coppered and copper fastened, has an iron keel weighing 900 pounds, which is solidly bolted to a keelson of the same material weighing 700 pounds, and in place of a tiller she is steered by a brass wheel working on cogs. She measures twenty-six feet on deck, carries jib and mainsail, and is a trifle over three tons burden. The proposed voyage created considerable sensation in the Golden State, and many pronounced it daring and foolhardy in the extreme to venture off the stormy coast of Oregon in such a mere nutshell. We hope the enterprise will prove successful.

ON DIT.—That in addition to the Henrietta, Fleetwing, and Vesta, the following American yachts will compete in the great international race which is expected to take place across the water during the Exposition: Alarm, schooner, 240 tuns, owned by Mr. A. C. Kingsland; the Halcyon, schooner, 130 tuns, owned by Mr. Hubbard, of Westchester county; Phantom, schooner, owned by Henry G. Stebbins; Widgeon, schooner, 105 tuns, owned by Frank Osgood; P'Hirondelle, schooner, 262 tuns; James Gordon Bennett, Jr.; and the N. D. Palmer, schooner, 194 tuns, owned by Capt. R. F. Loper, of Stonington

HAMILL'S NEW BOAT.—On Monday, the 29th inst., we inspected the new sheil which Jimmy Hamill intends to pull when he encounters Walter Brown in the big race fixed for the 21st, as she was carried past the CLIPPER office on her way to the Jersey City depot, where she was shipped on the 4 P. M. train for Pittsburgh. She is a model craft, and, barring the polish, equal to Brown's in appearance. Mac says it's the fastest he ever built, and he ought to know.

A BOAT RACE between the Columbian Club of this city and Mutual, of Albany, is to take place in May.

THE NEW YORK YACHT CLUB held a meeting on the 27th of April, at which Mr. Lloyd Phœnix was chosen Rear Commodore. He recently purchased the Widgeon, a handsome craft of 150 tons, from Mr. Francis Osgood, one of the owners of the now famous Fleetwing.

TROTTING ON THE UNION AND FASHION COURSES, L. I.

During the past week the second of the Union Course Season purses was trotted for on that track, and was productive of more than usual interest on account of the circumstances attending it. The purse was $100, mile heats, three in five, in harness, and seven horses were entered for it. Five of these came to the post, viz., William Whelan's blk. m., Lady Close; Hiram Howes' s. g., Washington Irving; D. Pfifer's g. m., Jessie; W. Borst's s. g., Ed. Ellis; and Mike Rogers' blk. m., Black Bess. There were so many rumors of the speed Lady Close had shown in private, that she was made the favorite both in the pools and the betting at the rate of one hundred to fifty. Just after the start Lady Close, on attempting to take the pole from Washington Irving, came into violent collision with the sulky of the latter; the consequence was Whelan was thrown out, the sulky broken into pieces, and her ladyship galloped around the course with the shattered vehicle at her heels, cutting herself badly. She was eventually stopped before the others came up with her. Washington Irving (whose driver had great difficulty in preventing his sulky being upset by the collision, but at last succeeded in balancing it), took and maintained the lead throughout, and won by twenty lengths, in 2:39½; Black Bess second, and Jessie, Ed. Ellis and Lady Close distanced. The victory of Washington Irving seemed now to be a certainty, and $100 to $10 and even $100 to $5 was laid that he won. Breaking badly in the next heat, Black Bess, who was admirably driven by Mike Rogers, passed and beat him by four lengths, in 2:39¼. The betting was now in favor of the mare, and she won the next two heats and the race in 2:48¾, 2:46¼, the betting men experiencing a heavy fall on the result.

WEDNESDAY, April 25, purse $100, mile heats, best three in five, in harness.

M. Rogers entered blk m, Black Bess	2	1	1
H. Howe entered ch g, Washington Irving	1	2	2	2
W. Whelan entered blk m, Lady Close	dis.
W. Borst entered ch g, Ed. Ellis	dis.
D. Pfifer entered g m, Jessie	dis.
Budd Doble entered b m, Kate O'Brien	dr.
John Crooks entered blk g, Phil Sheridan	dr.

Time, 2:39¼; 2:39½; 2:48¾; 2:46¼.

On the Fashion Course, a match for $300 between J. McCann's s. g. Boy from Home, and J. O'Neil's s. g. Snow Drop, mile heats, three in five, in harness, was trotted on the 15th ult. It was run in the midst of a thunder storm, and won in three heats by Boy from Home, in 3:08, 3:09, 3:04. On Friday, the 26th ult., the first of the season purses of this course was trotted for, being one of $100, mile heats, three in five, in harness, for horses that had never trotted for money. There were fourteen entries, of which number five started. These were D. Mace's g. g.; Dr. Ogle's b. m., Belle of Rockland; W. Morgan's b. m., Lady Kendall; W. Borst's blk. g., Rapid; and J. Mitchin's s. s., Income. The renowned gray gelding was the favorite against the field, and he justified the high opinion entertained of him by winning the race in three straight heats, as per annexed summary.

FASHION COURSE, L. I.—Friday, April 26, purse of $100, mile heats, 3 in 5, in harness.

Mr. Hanard entered Grey Gelding	1	1	1
W. Borst entered blk g, Rapid	4	2	2
Dr. Ogle entered b m, Belle of Rockland	2	3	3
Mr. Morgan entered b. m, Lady Kendall	3	4	4
J. Mitchin entered ch s, Income	5	dr.

Time, 2:41¾; 2:37½; 2:37.

A race between two black mares formerly driven together, but now owned separately, followed. It was for $200, mile and repeat, in harness, Budd Doble driving Grace Darling and Dan Mace Mr. Copp's mare. The latter was the favorite, but Grace Darling won in two heats, in 2:48¼, 2:50.

TROT AT RIVERSIDE PARK, MASS.—This favorite track of the Hub turfites was opened for the season on the 23d ult., when a trot for a $400 purse, mile heats, 3 in 5, under saddle, came off between Jas. Pitz's br. g. Washington, W. Woodruff's s. g. Nimble Dick and Geo. Wood's b. g. Toby Candor. The first named won in three straight heats. Time, 2:45½; 2:43; 2:45. The track was in admirable condition, and the course presents a very neat and attractive appearance, having been thoroughly renovated.

FATAL CASUALTY ON A BALL GROUND.—During the progress of the opening game between the Athletic and Bachelor clubs' of Philadelphia, played on the 20th ult., Mr. Norris Bell, the right field of the latter, was struck in the face by a ball fresh from the bat, inflicting a very severe bruise. The injury was not regarded as serious at the time, but inflammation set in the following night, and despite the best medical treatment, the unfortunate young man breathed his last on the evening of the 22d. Mr. Bell resided at the corner of Eighth and Fitzwater streets, and his untimely decease occasioned deep sorrow to a large circle of friends.

THE OPENING GAMES LAST WEEK.—The weather during the past week was not exactly the thing for ball play, a chilly wind prevailing even when the sun was out in all its spring glory. The Knickerbockers partly opened on the 22d, the rain interrupting their sport. On Tuesday, 23d, the Eagle, Gotham and Sparta clubs had opening games at Hoboken; like the Irvingtons, at Irvington. On Wednesday, 24th, the rain again interrupted play.

GRAND TOURNEYS THIS SEASON.—Several tournaments are to mark the season's play of 1867, among them a grand meeting during the summer at Brooklyn, in which it is probable the Nationals of Albany, Unions of Lansingburgh, Irvingtons, Eurekas, &c., will take part with the leading Brooklyn clubs.

THE CALIFORNIA CHAMPIONSHIP.—The Cosmopolitan and Atlantic clubs of San Francisco were contestants in the first of a series of three games for the champion bat emblematic of the base ball supremacy of the yellow dust district, played on March 18th. The score was as follows:—Cosmopolitan, 35; Atlantic, 30.

A NEW CLUB, styled the Belfast, has just been organized in the flourishing town of that name way down in Maine. The officers are as below: President, F. Monroe; Vice-President, R. Lewis; Secretary, J. H. Mitchell; Treasurer, W. F. Washburn; Directors, J. Lewis, E. A. Dyer and A. A. Small.

RE-ORGANIZATION.—The Gymnastic Club, of Kittanning, Pa., have chosen the following gentlemen officers for the present season: President, Joseph Rush; Vice-President, C. Turney; Secretary, R. Smith; Treasurer, W. R. Dailey.

CAUTION TO MANAGERS.
Having been imposed upon by the firm of DAVIS & CO., I caution all managers to beware of said Davis. About six weeks ago I applied to this firm for talent, and in reply he offered to send me Nellie Whitney upon receipt of $25, for his yearly fee and 12 dollars for railroad fare. After waiting for a month without receiving any performers from him, I came to this city and calling upon him demanded my $25, as I did not wish his services any longer, offering to give him the $12 that I had sent for fare. He has refused to refund the booking fee, and I take this method of showing him up.

TO THE PUBLIC, CAUTION!
THE ONE HORSE MANAGER
WITH THE ONE HORSE SHOW
DOING A ONE HORSE BUSINESS.
ONE SICK CHINAMAN.
ONE PRINCIPAL FEATURE.
The above Institution, of late finding business on the decline, with nothing in the affair to make it a lucrative trade, THE NAME A FAILURE, resorts to the infamous practice of advertising the names of other parties as being with him WHO ARE NOT, which was the case when last here; he has the audacity to advertise BILLY EMERSON as follows:—"BILLY EMERSON, the Greatest Song and Dance Man in the World, is with this Troupe." The Agent, a sort of a Chill and Fever looking individual, also practices the imposition upon the different Journals of the country, by telling them that Billy Emerson had left NEWCOMB'S MINSTRELS, and joined their one horse affair; which report said agent made here in Dayton; but the report was contradicted on the arrival of NEWCOMB'S MINSTRELS last week, when the public soon learned that the ORIGINAL BILLY EMERSON WAS STILL WITH THE NEWCOMBS. Now such imposition as practiced by the
JOHN CHINAMAN, MANAGER AND AGENT,
should be put down. Such actions not only do
MR. EMERSON
an injury, by trying to palm off a
"HAM FATTER"
upon the Public for an
ARTISTE LIKE MR. EMERSON,
but destroy the confidence of the Public, who, on reading the Bills of the different shows that come along, expect, on going to the performance, to see the parties so advertised to appear, but on being disappointed naturally lose faith in nearly everything else that may follow.

DON JUAN IN AMERICA.

Written Expressly for the N. Y. Clipper.

(COPYRIGHT SECURED.)

CANTO VI.

I.

O foolish world! ever adoring greatness!
Yet never knowing what that greatness is;
The far-off star shines with unseen sedateness
Whilst rockets in their short-lived glory whiz.
Perhaps my poem has reached a point of lateness
Where moralizing would be useless; 'tis
Worth knowing, tho', that greatness is most brittle
And great men oftentimes are very little.

II.

Great Pope, for instance, like a question point (?)
Crooked and twisted, gave new life to Homer;
Himself and not his verse was out of joint—
To him the Iliad owes eternal Summer.
Small are one-half of those the gods anoint:
Great Holmes (tho' that I think is a misnomer)
Is little. Edgar Poe was a light-weight:
Perhaps we'd better say that little's great

III.

And greatness little. Fame, however vernal,
Must wither in the Autumn days of Time.
Compare it to an ear of corn; each kernel
Drops off, made rotten by the ages' rime,
Unless indeed it is so pure, supernal,
Deep-rooted, fixed, unwavering and sublime,
That (like the ear of corn again) the mould
Of years increases it an hundred fold.

IV.

If Juan had thus reasoned with himself
He might ere this have been a wealthy man,
For he'd a rare good chance of gaining pelf,
Not honestly, but there be few who can
Get rich till probity's placed on the shelf.
How was it that the old injunction ran?
"Do unto others as you'd have them do
To you?"—that's practiced now by very few.

V.

But by not doing so and cheating some
Don Juan in his Custom House position
Had opportunities to salt a sum
Enough to furnish one in his condition
With all the dainties, women, wine and rum
That heart might wish; but, though a politician,
My changeful hero threw the chance away
To join the army on the first of May.

VI.

But the eight months preceding this had brought Adventures in abundance; one of these,
Where Juan in a pretty scrape was caught,
I'll tell you all about, if so you please.
'Twas in the Winter's prime, Jack Frost had wrought
An icy mantle for all things that freeze,
While things that don't—young women and young men,
For instance—were most "precious jolly" then.

VII.

It was the skating season; 'twas decided
That skating was the thing, so, o'er the ice
A thousand youths and maidens gaily glided;
The boys remarked 'twas "bully," the girls "nice,"
While some few of these last who justly prided
Themselves upon their legs, fell once or twice,
Displaying pedal beauties shaped as neatly
As are the legs now run by Mr. Wheatley.

VIII.

My hero, who with new ambition burned,
Had never (mainly owing to the fact
That ice don't grow in Spain) essayed or learned
To skate. It really vexed him that he lacked
This knowledge, for with strong desire he yearned
To join the skaters. He'd sufficient tact
To take to 't quick, tho' in his first attempt
He from the sight of stars was not exempt.

IX.

But after several days of training he Appeared upon the park—struck boldly out,
And by his grace and his agility
Made good his slippery claims beyond a doubt.
He joined in all the sports, made very free
With half the girls, and so in just about
An hour the Don had really had more pleasure
Than in a year do many men of leisure.

X.

As he was leaving he beheld a lady
Whose deep dark veil obscured, he thought, a face
Kept by its owner most sedately shady,
But beautiful for all. It was a case
Where forced to judge from what he saw already
His curiosity increased apace,
And so he quckly made resolve to follow
This Venus home and then to play Apollo.

XI.

From underneath her short dress peeped two feet—
Like little mice they darted out and in,
While certainly the hands were very neat,
Cased in their dainty gloves of dark seal skin.
And then her ample bosom ('tis the seat
Of love) heaved in a manner that would win
The admiration of all those who fire
At sight of beauty with new-born desire.

XII.

And so Don Juan tracked this dark-veiled fair
Thro' many a street, admiring as he went
The ringlets that composed her rich black hair,
And thinking that for once he'd be content
To take with face unseen a lasting share
In this live stock. The lady her steps bent
Towards Union Square, and near the upper part
Don Juan found her house and lost his heart.

XIII.

The veil had really added to the spice
Of the adventure, and the wind had shown
Him silken-stockinged calves that might entice
A man to Hades by their power alone.
He had not heard her speak; it did suffice—
A little rippling laugh she gave; the tone
Of which was pure as those soft murmuring streams
That sing in unison with happy dreams.

XIV.

Next morning in the Herald there appeared
A "personal." "The gentleman would like
To meet the handsome lady whom he feared
To speak to yesterday. Address O'Dyke,
At Station D." This notice, duly smeared
With printers' ink, came out. Bennett did strike
My hero for ten shillings; that's the serious
Purport of all his influence mysterious.

XV.

This thing occurred on Wednesday. Friday night
Don Juan got an answer. "Mabel Miller,"
In a small hand such as most women write,
Assented that with greatest joy 'twould fill her
To meet on Sunday. Then she quoted Schiller
And ran off on a high poetic flight,
And put in some sn all nonsense that were better
Omitted, making up a woman's letter.

XVI.

The rendezvous was named as Astor Place,
And punctual to the hour the Spaniard came.
He was obliged to wait, as is the case
Most often when a woman chooses to name
A time for meeting, but at last a face
Appeared, deep veiled as ever, then the flame
In Juan's heart was roused again. He felt
Much like a fighter who had won a belt.

XVII.

Miss Mabel greeted him with modest bearing,
And told him that to chapel she was going;
He asked her if she objected to his sharing
Her seat. "Oh no." A heavy wind was blowing,
And thro' this and the veil that she was wearing
Her voice seemed very weak. The Don not knowing
Exactly what to say, proposed she show
Her face, whereat she sharply answered "no."

XVIII.

But after services were over he Went with her to her house; she asked him in,
And being there alone he felt more free
And less constrained; he thought 'twould be no sin
To take at least the little liberty
Of lifting that black veil, thus might he win
A sight of her, the loveliest of creatures:
Up came the covering—he beheld her features!

TO BE CONTINUED.

DOG DISPUTE IN THE ELM CITY.—New Haven is getting to be quite a lively place, and what with its students and sports is likely at no distant day to go ahead of Gotham, if things go on as they have of late in that vicinity. Race Bolster and Warburton fought in the Land of Steady Habits, so did the Cast Iron Man and Rooke, and cock fights are not of unfrequent occurrence in Hartford, Bridgeport, New London, and other places in Connecticut. On the afternoon of April 26th, the New Haven folks were treated to a rattling dog fight between canines owned respectively by Tom Jennings, of the Modern Athens, and Jim Turner, of Gotham, said to have been for $500 a side. The spot chosen for the event was East Rock. By 2 P. M. the spectators were on hand, as were the principals and their "dawgs," the latter two bull terriers of large size, and apparently good breeding, and shortly after that time the "animules" were led into the impromptu ring; the handlers got to their work of rubbing down and mouth-washing, and the referee, watch in hand, prepared to give the signal, amid general excitement. Betting was somewhat in favor of the Boston dog. In a few moments the canines were let go. At first the New York dog seemed to be the stronger and the most probable winner, but what the Bostonian lacked in muscle he made up in activity. The New Yorker would meet his teeth in his opponent's neck and body. The champion of the "hub" had a capital knack of wriggling himself away, and in turn seizing his adversary of Manhattan with a most tenacious grip. After fighting some ten minutes the New Yorker seemed to be losing strength, while he from Massachusetts increased in venom and spite. This was not to continue, for plucking up spirit, New York went in to win, and after 12¾ minutes' struggling, tussling and snarling the Boston dog turned tail, and New York won the fight.

OUR PORTRAIT GALLERY.

EPH HORN.

This gentleman's name has been identified with negro minstrelsy from its earliest date. In days of yore Eph was the head and front of some of the best bands in this country. He was born in the city of Philadelphia in 1823, and at a very early age displayed comic powers of extraordinary ability. For several years he was a subject for Prof. Rogers in his lectures on mesmerism. He first put on burnt-cork in 1837. At that time the Virginia Serenaders were performing at Temperance Hall, Philadelphia, corner of Third and Green streets. Dick Myers (professionally known as Ole Bull Myers), Jim Sandford, Ned Kelly, Ned Deaves, John Diamond, W. Horn, Tony Winnemore and Master Proctor, comprised the company. Eph joined the party and did anything and everything. The Master Proctor in the company is now the redoubtable Doctor Richard Patrick Jones, well known as editor of publications for circus companies. At that time he played the bones on the end, and was considered a clever performer. After being with the company a few months Horn took the end vacated by the "Doctor," and played the bones. He at once became a favorite. The company continued there for three years, after which they opened in the lecture room of the Chinese Saloon, on Ninth street, below Chestnut. There they remained about a year, when they took a trip through the country. Returned to Philadelphia, where they re-organized and played at the Howard Athenæum, Boston, for some time, being there during the celebration of Bunker Hill, June 17th, 1843. John Tyler, the President of the United States, and all his secretaries were present. There was a lively time in Boston, and the minstrel boys were in high favor. Daniel Webster, who delivered the oration at the celebration of the monument, was in nightly attendance at the entertainment of the minstrels, and Eph was a great favorite of the statesman. Leaving Boston they took a trip all through the Southern country, and returning to Philadelphia took a rest, after which they visited the principal towns in Pennsylvania. At that time railroads were not to be found so easily as at present, and the boys of cork did nearly all their traveling by stage coaches. Returning to Philadelphia they opened in the large room of the Chinese Saloon. At that time business with Manager Quinlan, of the Chestnut Street Theatre, was very dull, and the stage of Old Drury became the scene of the jokes of the Virginia Serenaders. For three seasons they played with success at the Chestnut. Earl Pierce and Mr. Fellows then organized a band, and secured Eph as end man. They opened at Mitchell's Olympic, in this city, for seventeen nights, but owing to a quarrel between Dick Myers, Jim Sandford and the managers, there was a change in the company. At that time Eph was only receiving $17 a week salary, but so great a favorite had he become that sooner than lose him Pierce and Fellows increased his salary from $17 to $100 a week. His fame became world wide, and in 1854 he visited California with the original E. P. Christy's Minstrels. At this time the troupe consisted of Earl Pierce, J. B. Donniker, Tom Christian, Lewis Mairs, Tom Vaughn, S. C. Campbell, Tom Briggs, E. P. Christy and Eph Horn. Getting tired of the golden country, he returned to Philadelphia to the bosom of his family, where he reposed for a while. He was then engaged by Thomas Maguire for another trip to California, in 1859, but his brother dying in the fall of that year, he returned to his home. After this he played star engagements with S. S. Sanford's Minstrels, Philadelphia, and other companies. For one season he was with John P. Ordway's Æolians. During the season of 1861 he was a great favorite with the Bryant Brothers, and the following one was with Wood's Minstrels, with whom he remained until June, 1863, when, in conjunction with W. Newcomb, he became manager of a band, and they took a tour through the West. Returned to this city and re-appeared with Wood's Minstrels. In June, 1865, in company with Dan Bryant, he visited England on a tour of pleasure, but he had no sooner arrived there than he was besieged by the managers of the different Christy's minstrels to play a star engagement with them. He finally engaged with the Moore and Crocker party, and appeared with them in Liverpool on June 19, in "The Four Crows," the "Locomotive Nigger," and "Woman's Rights." He made an immense hit, and was pronounced one of the most original Ethiopian comedians ever seen in England. After an engagement of ten nights he sailed for home on July 1st. He was offered every inducement to remain in old England, even a partnership in different companies, but he preferred coming home. He re-appeared here with Bryant's Minstrels, and afterwards with Morris Brothers, in Boston. Mr. Horn is certainly in the front rank of his profession. There is a freshness, an originality of style about him that never fails to interest and carry his audience with him. Many of his acts are original with him. He it was who first introduced the "Returned Volunteer" and the "Shakers." His act of the "Stage Struck Darkey," for depth of feeling and pathos, has not been exceeded on any stage. His "Locomotive" act is a capital thing. His imitations of a locomotive in motion and about to be at rest are finely done. His "Woman's Rights" is one of his best acts. He dwells in a pseudo comic manner on the much vexed question, "Woman's Rights," and, bringing several fresh eccentricities into play, convulses his audience in an almost alarming manner. He has an innate appreciation of the humorous, and often provokes roars of laughter by the simplest and, when he performs them, apparently the easiest means. May he live to tickle audiences for many years to come. At present he is engaged with Kelly and Leon's Minstrels in this city.

MORMON THEATRICALS,

Outside Brigham Young's theatre is a rough Doric edifice, in which the architect has contrived to produce a certain effect by very simple means; inside, it is high and airy, having no curtains and no boxes, save two in the proscenium, with light columns to divide the tiers, and having no other decoration than pure white paint and gold. The pit, rising sharply from the orchestra, so that every one seated on its benches can see and hear to advantage, is the choicest part of the house. All these benches are let to families and here the principal elders and bishops may be seen every play-night, surrounded by their wives and children, laughing and clapping their hands like boys at a pantomime. Yon rocking chair in the centre of the pit is Young's own seat—his place of pleasure, in the midst of his saints. When he chooses to occupy his private box, one of his wives—perhaps Eliza the Poetess, Harriet the Pale, or Amelia the Magnificent—rocks herself in his chair while laughing at the play. Round about the chair, as the place of honor, cluster the benches of those who claim to stand nearest their prophet; of Heber Kimball, first councillor; of Daniel Wells, second councillor and general in chief; of George A. Smith, apostle and historian of the Church; of George E. Cameron, apostle; of Edward Hunter, presiding bishop; of Elder Stenhouse, and of a host of less brilliant Mormon lights. In the two sides of the proscenium nestle two private boxes; one is reserved for the prophet when he pleases to be alone, or wishes to have a gossip with a friend; the other is given up to the girls who have to play during the night but who are not engaged in the immediate business of the piece. As a rule, every man's pleasure is considered in this model play-house; and I can answer, on the part of Miss Adams, Miss Alexander, and other young artists, that this appropriation to their sole use of a private box, into which they can run at all times, in any dress, without being seen, is considered by them as a very great comfort. Through the quick eye and careful hand of his manager, Hiram Clawson, the president may be congratulated on having made his playhouse into something coming near to that which he conceives a playhouse should be. Everything in front of the footlights is in keeping; peace and order reign in the midst of fun and frolic. Neither within the doors or about them do you find the riot of our own Lyceum and Drury Lane; no loose women, no pickpockets, no ragged boys and girls, no drunken and blaspheming men. As a Mormon never drinks spirits and rarely smokes tobacco, the only dissipation in which you find these hundreds of hearty creatures indulging their appetite is, that of sucking a peach. Short plays are in vogue in this theatre, just as short sermons are the rule of yon tabernacle. The curtain, which rises at eight, comes down at half-past ten; and, as the Mormon fashion is for people to sup before going out, they retire to rest the moment they get home, never suffering their amusements to infringe on the labors of the coming day. Your bell rings for breakfast at six o'clock. But the chief beauties of this model playhouse lie behind the scenes—in the ample space, a the perfect light, the scrupulous cleanliness of every part. I am pretty well acquainted with green rooms and side wings in Europe; but I have never seen, not in Italian and Austrian theatres, so many delicate arrangements for the privacy and comfort of ladies and gentlemen as at Salt Lake. The green room is a real drawing room. The scene painters have their proper studios; the dressers and decorators have immense magazines. Every lady, however small her part in the play, has a dressing room to herself. Young understands that the true work of reform in a playhouse must begin behind the scenes; that you must elevate the actor before you can purify the stage. To this end he not only builds dressing rooms and a private box for the ladies who have to act, but he places his daughters on the stage as an example and encouragement to others. Three of these young sultanas, Alice, Emily and Zina, are on the stage. With Alice, the youngest wife of Elder Clawson, I had the honor to make an acquaintance, which might be called a friendship, and from her lips I have learnt a good deal as to her father's notions about stage reform. "I am not myself very fond of playing, she said to me one day as we sat at dinner—not in these words, perhaps, but to this effect—"but my father desires that my sisters and myself should act sometimes, as he does not think it right to ask any poor man's child to do anything which his own children would object to do." Her dislike for playing, as she afterwards told me, arose from a feeling that nature had given her no abilities for acting well; she was fond of going to see a good piece, and seldom omitted being present when she had not to play. Brigham Young has to create, as well as to reform the stage, in Salt Lake City; and the chief trouble of a manager who is 700 miles from the next theatre must always be with his artists. Talent for the work does not grow in every field like a sunflower or a peach tree; it must be sought for in nooks and corners; now in the workshop, anon in a dairy, then in counting-house; but wherever the talent may be found, Young cannot think of asking any young girl to do a thing which it is supposed that a daughter of his own would scorn.

LAST WORDS OF EMINENT MEN.

BY "GRIS."

All eminent men have their "last words," just before giving their mortal coil the shake, and these words are often quoted and preserved. Some of them appear to make a study of rendering their closing remarks as effective as possible; if they didn't, they wouldn't be eminent men. No common man ever thinks it worth while to say anything smart just because he is going to die; if he does, he is sure to make a failure of it. What a world of grandeur in the final exclamation of Bonaparte—"Head of the Army!"—and what prophetic meaning was embodied in Webster's "I still live!"

All eminent men have to die some time, which, in many cases, isn't altogether a public calamity, and the eminent men with whom the present day is so lavishly endowed must naturally pass away. They will, of course, be a little anxious about their last words—be concerned, as it were, to state about the right thing as they depart, and in the hurry of going this might not readily present itself. It has occurred to us that we might be doing our eminent men a service by suggesting some "last words," which they can adopt if they choose to do so. We don't charge anything for them:—

Andy Johnson—"Oh! Moses."
Jeff. Davis—"I only ask to be let alone."
John Morrissey—"Throw up the sponge."
Ben Butler—"Bottled up again."
Gen. Grant—"I have fought it out."
Banks—"Let 'em slide."
Forrest—"You have sent for me and I have come."
J. N. Free—"I assume the pressure."
Prentice—"Prentice's last."
Forney—"Dead, for a duc"—(dies).
Seward—"It will be over in sixty days."
Greeley—"H. G."
Vallandigham—"Asa! Asa!"
Barnum—"What is it?"
Ashley—"Impeach! impeach!"
Garrett Davis—"I stick by the Kentucky Resolution of '98."

RACKETS.

THE INTERNATIONAL RACKET MATCH.

THE ENGLISH CHAMPION THE WINNER.

A CLOSE CONTEST AND EXCITING FINISH.

In last week's CLIPPER we gave the particulars of the great international match at rackets for £1,000 between William Gray, of Cambridge, and Frederick Foulkes, of New York, the respective champion players of Great Britain and America, from its first inception up to the period of its interruption during the play by darkness on the afternoon of Monday, the 22d ult. At that time five games of the seven constituting the match had been played. Gray had won the first and third by a score of 15 aces to 5 and 15 aces to 6 respectively; while Foulkes had credited himself with the second, fourth and fifth games, winning the first named by a score of 15 aces to 5 (by a singular coincidence exactly the same points as he had been beaten by in the previous game); the fourth by a score of 18 aces to 15, the game having been set 5 when the scores stood 13 each; and the fifth by a score of 17 aces to 14, the game having been set 3 when the players stood 14 all. In the sixth game Gray had scored 6 aces to Foulkes 5, the latter having his hand in, when the darkness consequent upon an impending thunder storm rendered a postponement of the match until 3 o'clock P. M. the following day absolutely necessary. The state of the match at this point of its progress was decidedly in favor of the American champion, who, in addition to the advantage of being one game ahead of his opponent, and only requiring one more to win the match, was playing in his own court, with the peculiarities of which he was thoroughly acquainted, and with the confidence such decided advantages naturally inspired.

On Tuesday, the 23d ult., precisely at the hour appointed, the two champions appeared in the Court to resume play. The attendance, although equally select, was not quite so large as on the previous day, and the galleries were not inconveniently crowded. The falling off in the number of spectators was to be attributed to the fact that, judging from the first day's play and the state of the games, the match was regarded as a foregone conclusion for the American champion. Still there was little speculation, compared with the immense amounts bet the day before, and the backers of the English player eagerly took the odds of $500 to $400 that occasionally some sanguine partisan of Foulkes would offer on his winning. The confidence of Gray's party never failed them, for, notwithstanding the difference in the state of the game, they relied with assurance upon the splendid physical condition that his trainer, Mr. Watters, had brought him in, and his ability to endure, better than his antagonist, the tremendous muscular exhaustion consequent on the violent exertions of the previous day. On the other hand the friends of Mr. Foulkes were not over-sanguine of success, for they now saw him contending against an opponent the most formidable he had ever before encountered, and whose magnificent play elicited their warmest admiration. One of Gray's staunchest supporters and heaviest backers the day previous was the Hon. John Morrissey, but he did not attend on the second day, as he thought it almost certain that Foulkes would win, in view of the lead in the score of the game which he had obtained. The day was bright, warm and pleasant, and highly favorable for the play. When the game was resumed Gray's score was 6 aces to Foulkes' 5, and the latter's hand in. Foulkes commenced with 2 aces, and was then put out, his score being now 7 to Gray's 6. The latter went in, but was sent back without scoring, and Foulkes added an ace to his score before he lost his hand. Gray made a couple of aces and then retired, the game being now 8 aces each. A fine rally ended in Foulkes being put out, and Gray commenced playing in such magnificent style as to electrify the beholders with his wonderful skill, quickness of eye and hand, and agility. He kept scoring ace after ace until he had made a run of 7, when the voice of the marker proclaiming "game" made the lookers on aware that there was now a tie in the games won, and that the ensuing game, the seventh, would decide the first of the home and home matches for the thousand sovereigns. Loud cheers at the result from the friends of both champions manifested the deep interest felt in the momentous contest, and they prepared to view with concentrated interest the deciding tourney.

Gray, having won the last game, was entitled to the hand, and he commenced in the same superb style of play in which he had finished the last. The rallies were magnificent, but brilliant as was the play and execution of the American Champion, they were surpassed and excelled in every point by the Englishman's. Ace after ace was rapidly scored, and he did not lose his hand until the marker had called the game 7 to his opponent's "love." Foulkes now went in to do or die, but the fates were against him and he retired without troubling the scorer. He had his revenge, however, for he put out Gray for "nix," and went in determined to struggle gamely. It was useless, however, contending against such a dangerous rival, whose play seemed to increase in brilliancy every stroke. He was quickly put out without scoring, and Gray added a couple of aces to his credit before he was got rid of. Again did Foulkes fail to mark in his third hand, and Gray in his fourth hand was equally unsuccessful. Foulkes' ill luck still haunted him, and when he retired his score stood "love" to Gray 9. The latter now gave another superb display of the beauties of rackets and made six aces in succession, thus completing the required 15 aces, without having allowed his antagonist to score a single one, and winning the first of the home and home matches by four games to three. The victor was warmly congratulated and loudly cheered by all parties on his deserved success, and he bore his honors with becoming modesty, candidly acknowledging that in the American Champion, Mr. Foulkes, he had met the most accomplished player and formidable opponent he had ever before encountered. We give the scores of the entire seven games:—

FIRST GAME.

QUOITING.

THE PROPOSED QUOITING MATCH

BETWEEN

R. WALKINSHAW, OF SCOTLAND,

AND

W. HODGSON, OF PENNSYLVANIA, U. S.

About two months ago we received a letter from Mr. H. Currie, of 92 Union street, Glasgow, together with a challenge from R. Walkinshaw, to the following effect:

"CHALLENGE TO AMERICA.—R. Walkinshaw (the Carlops Tailor), of Scotland, will play Wm. Hodgson, or any man in America, for £200 a side and the Championship, distance 21 yards, stiff sticking clay ends, pins level with clay, all clay cleared at measurement, and to measure to top of pin. The Editor of Bell's Life to be stakeholder, and £20 deposited in his hands will at once be covered, when the place of playing, amount of expenses to be allowed or accepted, and other terms can be adjusted."

This elicited a response from Hodgson, as follows:

"Seeing a challenge to me in the CLIPPER from Walkinshaw, the Carlops Tailor, of Glasgow, Scotland, to play me or any other man in America, I think in duty to myself and in honor to this, my adopted country, that such a challenge should not go unnoticed. I, William Hodgson, of America, will play Walkinshaw, or any other man in the Kingdom of Great Britain, 21 yards distance, or 18 yards, for one thousand dollars a side or upwards, to play in New York City, nine inch quoits, each to choose a hob and not to be above one inch above the clay, and to be stiff sticking clay ends and no clay to be disturbed till after measurement; to measure to the top of the hob. Should these lines meet the views of Mr. Walkinshaw, by sending one hundred dollars to the CLIPPER, and articles of agreement, I will immediately attend to it. Mr. Frank Queen to be the final stakeholder."

As soon as this was received in Scotland, Mr. Walkinshaw lost no time in writing, and, as we were misinformed in regard to the expenses to be allowed for going there, we are very glad to be set right, and as the Glasgow representative is willing to take £30 expenses to play in New York, or give £50 to play in Glasgow, we can see no reasonable objection why the match should not be made. In view of the late international racket match, wherein the British champion carried off the honors, coming over three thousand miles to do it, we can guarantee as hospitable treatment and cordial a welcome there as William Gray received in this country, and vice versa. Here is the second letter from the Caledonian champion:

GLASGOW, April 8, 1867.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.—Sir.—I have seen your publication of the 23d of March last, containing a reply on the part of W. Hodgson to my challenge. Prefixed to that reply you insert a note that my challenge contained an offer to Hodgson of $125 in gold, to come to Scotland. This was not so. I now meet your views in stating explicitly my terms, and to save trouble I may add, I will play on none other.

"I, Robert Walkinshaw, of Scotland, will play Hodgson or any other man in America a match at quoits for £200 a side—game 121 shots up, (61 shots to be played on a Saturday and the remaining 60 shots on the Monday following), distance twenty-one yards. Stiff sticking clay ends, pins to be two feet long of one inch iron, tapered to a half inch at top, to be kept level with the clay, all clay to be cleared away at measurement, and the nearest to the top of the pin to count. Quoits not to exceed nine inches in diameter. The ground to be fair level quoiting ground and to be securely staked and roped, not less than twenty-seven yards by ten yards, and only two men for each player and the referee to be admitted within the ropes. I agree to allow Hodgson £50 in gold and one third of the gate money after deducting expenses, to play on Mr. William Mallock's Ground, Glasgow, N. B., or I will accept these terms and play in New York City. The editor of Bell's Life to be stakeholder if the match is played in Scotland, or the editor of the NEW YORK CLIPPER if the match is played in New York. Upon the above terms I am prepared to sign articles and make a deposit. If I have to visit America, I would incline to be with you early in September. I request a definite reply from Mr. Hodgson. Any communication will find me at Mr. Currie's, 92 Union street, Glasgow, N. B.

Your Obedient Servant, R. WALKINSHAW.

That this will meet with a speedy reply from Mr. Hodgson none who know the man will for a moment doubt, so that by next week we may be in a position to announce Hodgson's acceptance of one or the other of Walkinshaw's propositions, and thus create a new and great excitement among all fond of athletic sports.

MILLS, THE WALKER, MATCHED WITH WOLF.—Jimmy Mills, the Australian ped, who claims fraternal relationship with the renowned Teddy, having challenged all California for a two mile walk, Charley Wolf, the Flying Baker, replied thereto, and, on the 26th of March, articles were signed to walk two miles for $500 a side, and the championship of California, on Sunday, April 28th, on the Ocean Race Track, near San Francisco, Cal., between 2 and 4 P. M. $250 a side were put up in the hands of David Mendes, of Commercial st., at the signing, and the remainder was to have been posted on the 7th of April. The match was creating considerable interest in California.

RULES AND REGULATIONS

ADOPTED BY THE

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF BASE BALL PLAYERS,

HELD IN NEW YORK, DEC. 12th, 1866.

Section 1. The ball must weigh not less than five and one half, nor more than five and three fourths ounces, avoirdupois. It must measure not less than nine and one-half, nor more than nine and three-fourths inches in circumference. It must be composed of India rubber and yarn, and covered with leather, and, in all match games, shall be furnished by the challenging club, and become the property of the winning club as a trophy of victory.

Sec. 2. The bat must be round, and must not exceed two and a half inches in diameter in the thickest part. It must be made of wood, and may be of any length to suit the striker.

Sec. 3. The bases must be four in number, placed at equal distances from each other, and securely fastened upon each corner of a square, whose sides are respectively thirty yards. They must be so constructed as to be distinctly seen by the umpire, and must cover a space equal to one square foot of surface. The first, second and third bases shall be canvas bags, painted white, and filled with some soft material; the home base and pitcher's point to be each marked by a flat circular iron plate, painted or enameled white.

Sec. 4. The base from which the ball is struck shall be designated the Home Base, and must be directly opposite to the second base; the first base must always be that upon the right hand, and the third base that upon the left hand side of the striker, when occupying his position at the Home Base. And in all match games, a line connecting the home and first base and the home and third base, shall be marked by the use of chalk, or other suitable material, so as to be distinctly seen by the umpire.

Sec. 5. The pitcher's position shall be designated by two lines, two yards in length, drawn at right angles to a line from home to second base, having their centers upon that line at two fixed iron plates, placed at points fifteen and sixteen and one-third yards distant from the home base. The pitcher must stand within the lines, and must deliver the ball as near as possible over the centre of the home base, and fairly for the striker.

Sec. 6. Should the pitcher repeatedly fail to deliver to the striker fair balls, for the apparent purpose of delaying the game, or for any cause, the umpire, after warning him, shall call one ball, and if the pitcher persists in such action, two and three balls; when three balls shall have been called, the striker shall take the first base; and should any base be occupied at that time, each player occupying it or them shall take one base without being put out. All balls delivered by the pitcher, striking the ground in front of the home base, or pitched over the head of the batsman, or pitched to the side opposite to that which the batsman strikes from, shall be considered unfair balls.

Sec. 7. The ball must be pitched, not jerked or thrown, to the bat; and whenever the pitcher moves with the apparent purpose or pretension to deliver the ball, he shall so deliver it, and must have neither foot in advance of the front line or off the ground at the time of delivering the ball; and if he fails in either of these particulars, then it shall be declared a balk. The ball shall be considered jerked, in the meaning of the rule, if the pitcher's arm touches his person when the arm is swung forward to deliver the ball; and it shall be regarded as a throw if the arm be bent at the elbow, at an angle from the body, or horizontally from the shoulder, when it is swung forward to deliver the ball. A pitched ball is one delivered with the arm straight, and swinging perpendicularly and free from the body.

Sec. 8. When a balk is made by the pitcher, every player running the bases is entitled to one base, without being put out.

[The striker cannot take a base on a balk, as he is not considered a "player running the bases" until he has struck a fair ball, and a balked ball is not a fair ball.]

Sec. 9. The striker shall be considered a player running the bases as soon as he has struck a fair ball.

Sec. 10. Any ball, delivered by the pitcher, on which a balk or a ball has been called, shall be considered dead and not in play until it has been settled in the hands of the pitcher, while he stands within the lines of his position; and no such ball, if hit, shall put the striker out.

[Both of the above are new sections.]

Sec. 11. If the ball, from a stroke of the bat, first touches the ground, the person of a player, or any other object, behind the range of home and the first base, or home and the third base, it shall be termed foul, and must be so declared by the umpire, unasked. If the ball first touches the ground, either upon or in front of the range of those bases, it shall be considered fair.

Sec. 12. A player making the home base shall be entitled to score one run.

Sec. 13. If three balls are struck at and missed, and the last one is not caught, either flying or upon the first bound, it shall be considered fair, and the striker must attempt to make his run.

Sec. 14. The striker is out if a foul ball is caught, either before touching the ground or upon the first bound.

Sec. 15. Or, if three balls are struck at and missed, and the last is caught, either before touching the ground or upon the first bound, provided the balls struck at are not those on which balls or balks have been called, or not those struck at for the purpose of wilfully striking out.

Sec. 16. Or, if a fair ball is struck, and the ball is caught without having touched the ground.

Sec. 17. Or, if a fair ball is struck, and the ball is held by an adversary on first base before the striker touches that base.

Sec. 18. Any player running the bases is out, if at any time he is touched by the ball while in play in the hands of an adversary, without some part of his person being on the base.

Sec. 19. No run or base can be made upon a foul ball; such a ball shall be considered dead, and not in play until it shall first have been settled in the hands of the pitcher. In such cases, players running bases shall return to them, and may be put out in so returning, in the same manner as when running to the first base.

Sec. 20. No run or base can be made when a fair ball has been caught without having touched the ground; such a ball shall be considered alive and in play. In such case, players running bases shall return to them, and may be put out in so returning, in the same manner as when running to first base; but players, when balls are so caught, may run their bases immediately after the ball has been settled in the hands of the player catching it.

Sec. 21. The striker, when in the act of striking, shall not step forward or backward, but must stand on a line drawn through the centre of the home base, not exceeding in length three feet from either side thereof, and parallel with the line occupied by the pitcher. He shall be considered the striker until he has struck a fair ball. Players must strike in regular rotation, and, after the first innings is played, the turn commences with the player who stands on the list next to the one who lost the third hand.

Sec. 22. Players must take their bases in the order of striking; and when a fair ball is struck, and not caught flying, the first base must be vacated, as also the second and third bases, if they are occupied at the same time. Players may be put out on any base, under these circumstances, in the same manner as when running to the first base.

Sec. 23. Players running bases must touch them; and so far as possible, keep upon the direct line between them; and must touch them in the following order: first, second, third and home; and if returning must reverse this order; and should any player run three feet out of this line, for the purpose of avoiding the ball in the hands of an adversary, he shall be declared out.

[A player failing to touch his base must be declared out—after an appeal—unless he can return to the base before he is touched.]

Sec. 24. Any player, who shall intentionally prevent an adversary from catching or fielding the ball, shall be declared out.

Sec. 25. If the player is prevented from making a base, by the intentional obstruction of an adversary, he shall be entitled to that base, and not be put out.

Sec. 26. If an adversary stops the ball with his hat or cap, or if a ball be stopped by any person not engaged in the game, or if it be taken from the hands of any one not engaged in the game, no player can be put out unless the ball shall first have been settled in the hands of the pitcher, while he stands within the lines of his position.

Sec. 27. If a ball from the stroke of a bat is held under any other circumstances than as enumerated in Section 22, and without having touched the ground, the striker is out.

MILL BETWEEN J. FRANKLIN AND JACK WELSH,

FOR £5 A SIDE.

A lively little affair was brought off on Monday morning, April 8, near Oscott, in the Birmingham district, between Jem Franklin and Jack Welsh, two light weight aspirants of the hardware village. Franklin, who is in his 21st year, stands 5ft 5½in, and has twice previously appeared in the P. R., viz., with Jem Winfield (Dardy) and T. Glynn (Russian), by both of whom he was defeated. Jack Welsh, hitherto untried, and brother of Jemmy Welsh (a well-known performer) has long been regarded as a very clever "delineator" with the gloves, is 18 years of age, 5ft 3in in height, and is a very well made lad for a "brush." The great desiderata for a "mill," choice of referee and battle ground, being satisfactorily disposed of over night, an early start brought the party to a snug little enclosure between Oscott and Witton, Warwickshire, shortly after eight A. M., and at 8:12 they faced each other, even money being laid, with Franklin for choice.

THE FIGHT.

Round 1. As the lads stood up the disparity in size was very apparent, Franklin being nearly three inches over his man, both stripping in very fair condition. Long sparring commenced proceedings, Franklin the first to essay on the body with the left, but his wary opponent was away like a shot; more sparring, when Welsh shot out his left on the right cheek, getting well away; on joining again some lively half-arm work ensued, Franklin boring his man down.

2. On coming up Franklin showed the ruby from his mouth, and the "first event" was accorded to Welsh, who looked considerably flushed and anxious; he again visited the "speaker," cutting the lower lip and drawing a fresh instalment. Franklin dashed his left on Jack's right peeper, which blinked again, and rushing on the little 'un, bored him down.

3. Franklin again, after a couple of long shots, got home sharply on the left eye, and Welsh "ducking," clutched his opponent with the view of throwing him, but was hardly "up to it," and after a determined struggle Welsh was undermost.

4. Was a wrestling match, hardly a blow being struck, when Welsh threw his opponent.

5. Franklin made a rush at the little 'un, and after receiving on the face, fought him down in a rally.

6. Welsh got well home on the chest, but was countered on the left peeper. Welsh then made his left on the body, and fell from the force of his own blow.

7. Franklin bored Welsh down.

8. After a slight exchange Welsh rushed in, collaring his opponent round the haunches, and a sharp tussle ended in both falling side by side.

9 to 19. Welsh began to show signs of his opponent's handiwork, both eyes closing, and being flushed on the dial, Franklin almost free from mark. The latter now began to take strange liberties, and fought Welsh down, getting on the dial. Welsh responded to the best of his ability, but his blow left no impression on Franklin, and his seconds, finding his chance of winning a thoroughly hopeless one, threw up the sponge for him, after contending 19 rounds in 40 minutes.

W. HAWKINS AND DAVID WEBSTER, OF WALSALL.

These men met on Monday, April 8, at Aldridge, near Walsall, to contend at catch weight, for £5 a side. Webster is in his 20th year, and stands about 5 ft. 6 in., and his weight is 8st 6lb. Hawkins is about the same age, his height 5 ft. 3 in., and his weight 7st 10lb. On the men arriving at the appointed rendezvous no time was lost in getting into the ring, and a short but bustling fight ensued, Hawkins getting the knock-down blow in the first round, by planting his right heavily on Webster's bread pan, and following his advantage up in the second round by getting well home on Webster's nasal organ, and drawing the claret freely, (first blood claimed and allowed), Webster getting but slightly on his opponent. In the third round Hawkins again led off, and a bustling round ensued in favor of Hawkins, who cross-countered his man with his right heavily on the jaw, knocking him down. In the fourth round Webster came up gamely, but evidently feeling the effect of Hawkins' handiwork. Hawkins finished the round by getting well home on Webster's left lug, sending him to grass. In the fifth round, as soon as they stood up, Hawkins rushed at his man, planting his right heavily on the tater trap, dislodging one of his masticators, and bored him down. On Webster being taken to his corner he refused to scratch, and Hawkins was proclaimed the winner, after five rounds, in 12 min. 3 sec., Webster not having a shadow of a chance.

JOE WORMALD AND NED O'BALDWIN.

The championship match was progressing most favorably at last accounts, and although both men have had to shift their training quarters during the week ending April 18, they have continued in good work and are both in excellent health. The final deposit of £20 a side was to be made at Billy Shaw's on Thursday, April 18, when preliminaries were to be settled. The day has been altered so as to avoid clashing with either the Two Thousand or One Thousand, but the battle was to take place in the week ending April 27, and the excursion was not to be aquatic, arrangements being made for a much more comfortable means of transport. This will be the first occasion on which the pugilists themselves, who have banded together to keep order, will make their essay; and on their success in this respect does the future of the Ring, in a great measure, depend. They have, it may be remembered, taken all responsibility into their own hands for the nonce, and intend to show that they will not be baulked in their determination to protect their patrons.

FIGHT BETWEEN DOLLAR WHITE AND FRANK WILSON, FOR £30.—Like many other meetings of a similar character held lately—especially in the Midland District—the fight between Dollar White, of Halesowen, and Frank Wilson (Mouse), of Birmingham, fixed to come off on April 9th, was prematurely brought to a close through the interference of the police, who have been encouraged by some recent magisterial decisions to strain every nerve in order to make frightful examples of the active members of the P. R. Both men had been staying for a few days at Bristol, and thence they departed with their friends and various other persons anxious to see what was expected to be a most interesting mill. A trysting place was difficult to find, for the police were on the look-out at the railway stations, and it was not until two o'clock in the afternoon that a ring was formed at Mangott's Field, on the Midland line. The betting was 6 to 4 on Wilson. White drew first blood in the course of the opening round, but between those following he was twice cautioned by the referee for grouging and biting. In the throws, Wilson had the best of it, and twice he got the hug on. The affair was cut short on the appearance of the constabulary at the end of the twelfth round, and after the fighting had lasted for 26 min. The men, who were not materially damaged, left for Birmingham, where it is likely arrangements were made for settling the matter in some way or other.

GAME ENCOUNTER IN THE LONDON DISTRICT.—Brunker and Kavanagh met on Monday, April 8, to settle their catch weight encounter for £11, the former staking £6 to Kavanagh's £5. A journey by rail brought the belligerents and their friends to a much frequented point of embarkation, but the weather was squally, causing the water to be so rough that the acting commissary refused to risk his precious person, much to the chagrin of Old Puggy White, who most gallantly crossed over, and quickly made all square with the magic circle. The Brighton Doctor and Jack Haley esquired Kavanagh; Tom Tyler and the accomplished Jack Hicks performing the polite for Bunker. The actual contest, however, calls for little description; it was one of those "rough and ready" "give and take and no flinching" affairs; but Brunker, the heavier man, from the first had the best of it, and in the middle of the battle took a great lead. It was not, however, until forty-one game and determined rounds had been bravely contested, and 1 hour 35min. had elapsed, when the opportunity of Kavanagh turning the tables was seen to be perfectly hopeless, that his seconds, finding he had no chance, threw up the sponge in token of his defeat, although much against his will, and Brunker was therefore hailed the winner.

MORE PUGILISTS IN TROUBLE.—At the Stafford Sessions on Wednesday, April 10th, before T. F. Twemlow, Charley Adams, Dick Cox, and Jack Adams were indicted for committing a breach of the peace by engaging in a prize fight at West Bromwich on December 26th last. The prisoners pleaded guilty to fighting, but denied that they were engaged in a prize fight. Mr. Young, who conducted the prosecution, considered this plea sufficient. The chairman said the practice of prize fighting had become so common in that county that there was one almost every week, and the magistrates were determined to put a stop to it. If two men turned out of a public house and fought, that was one thing, but a prize fight was quite another matter. There two or three hundred people collected together, and the damage they did by trespass and in other ways was incalculable. If the prisoners had been professional prize fighters the sentence would have been much more severe than the one he was about to pass. The prisoners were then sentenced to ten days' imprisonment each, and bound over in the sum of £20 each to keep the peace for six months.

THE LATE FIGHT BETWEEN GOSS AND ALLEN.—At the Newport Police Court on Saturday, April 6, Joe Goss, Tom Allen, and Henry Allen appeared on remand to answer the charge of breaking the peace, in the county of Monmouth, on the occasion of the recent fight at Marshfield. Mr. R. J. Cathcart again watched the case of the defendants. The proceedings were brief. It was stated that Mace had not surrendered, and that the evidence was not ready, and on those grounds the magistrates (Capt. Russell and Messrs. T. Powell, T. Brown and J. James) were asked for a remand. They did not, however, consider a further postponement necessary; they were satisfied, they said, with defendants' promise not to offend again, and were willing to accept their personal recognizances in £100 each to keep the peace for twelve months. These recognizances were at once entered into, and the defendants then left the court accompanied by their friends, a great many of whom were present.

IMPRISONMENT OF ROOKE AND ALLEN.—These men were tried Friday, April 12th, at the Kendal Quarter Sessions, for committing a breach of the peace on the occasion of their fight at Gray Rigg, Westmoreland, on February 5th last. The men were defended by Mr. M'Oubrey (specially retained and instructed by Mr. R. F. Thompson, solicitor, of Kendal). Both men were found guilty. Rooke was sentenced to three months imprisonment, and Allen to one month.

CHALLENGE FROM JEM MACE.—Mace writes that at his benefit at Hackney Wick, on Easter Monday, he would be prepared to make a match with any—champions, ex-champions, no champions, or coming champions, barring neither color nor clime—for £500 a side.

THE BIG RACES IN BRITAIN.—As the time for the principal events of the turf in England is all but here, and as there are many people on this side of the Atlantic who invest considerable on the horse of their choice on the several events, we here make room for the quotations on the three principal, viz., Two Thousand, Chester Cup, and the Derby:—

Two Thousand (run Tuesday, April 23d).—Plaudit, Watson, 100 to 30, off; Julius, M. Dawson, 6 to 1, off; Vauban, J. Day, 9 to 1, t.; Hermit, Bloss, 10 to 1, t.; Marksman, Waugh, 12 to 1, t.; Knight of the Garter, Bloss, 1,000 to 60, off; The General, Dover, 1,000 to 30, off; The Palmer, Porter, 1,000 to 20, off; Ferragus, in France, 1,000 to 20, off; Lord Hastings, private, 1,000 to 20, off, t. 1,000 to 15; Master Butterfly, private, 1,000 to 15, t. and off; Leading Suit, W. Day, 5,000 to 15, t., with a start; Stradbroke, P. Price, 1,000 to 25, offers to take.

Chester Cup (run Wednesday, May 1).—Lecturer, 4 yrs, 8st 7lb, J. Day, 8 to 1, off; Miss Havelock, 4 yrs, 6st 10lb, P. Price, 1,000 to 60, off; Midlle. Cleopatre, 4 yrs, 6st 9lb, P. Price, 25 to 1, t.; Seesaw, 4 yrs, 6st 9lb, private, 50 to 1, t.

Derby (run Wednesday, May 22).—The Rake, Jos. Dawson, 725 to 100, t.; Hermit, Bloss, 9 to 1, off; D'Estournel, Gilbert, 12 to 1, t. and off; Plaudit, Watson, 1,000 to 60, off; Taraban, J. Scott, 18 to 1, t.; Grand Cross, J. Scott, 1,000 to 40, off, t. 1,000 to 35; Julius, M. Dawson, 1,000 to 35, t.; Master Butterfly, private, 50 to 1, off; Ferragus, in France, 1,000 to 15, t.

DEATH OF AN OARSMAN.—Ted Carter, a well known Thames waterman, died at Lambeth on Friday, April 5, at the age of twenty-nine. His last public appearance was on March 14, 1865, when he was defeated by Dove; he was in 1860 a member of Baines' crew, and with them won several races along the coast; at the Sons of the Thames Regatta in the following year he was one of Sadler's crew; subsequently he rowed in a pair with Chapman against Fenton and Kemp, and in 1864 in a match with E. May.

FATAL BOAT ACCIDENT ON THE THAMES.—On Monday afternoon, April 8, old Tom Hoare, the ferryman at the Black Lion stairs, Hammersmith, and father of the well known oarsman of the same name, was drowned off Chiswick Ait. Notwithstanding the lumpy state of the river, and the squally weather, he ventured out in a sailing boat, and when at a considerable distance from the shore the wind caught and tore the sail so as to cause it to over-balance the boat, which was at once upset. Hoare was thrown into the water, and though he was known to be a good swimmer, was drowned. This occurrence, coupled with the accident to the Hammersmith amateurs, which occurred near the same time, occasioned much excitement in the neighborhood, where Hoare was much respected.

THE GAME OF CHESS.

To Correspondents.

L. HENRY, St. Louis.—The opening you send is not without interest. The Defence should play 6..P to Q 3d, then, if 7..Q B to Kt 5th, 7..Q B to K 3; 8..K B to Kt 3 best—and now comes the point. We say Defence, 8..Q Kt to K 2d. Now, if the Attack, as nine out of ten would, take K Kt, Kt P × B, followed as soon as possible by K to R sq., and the Attack must take extraordinary care of himself or he will fall into mischief through the open file in front of his castled king. Efforts to establish an American agency for that work were fruitless. Write direct to Herr L., 28 Camden Road, London, N. W.

THOS. E. BEAN, Galena.—We have furnished you the required solution by mail, as requested.

E. DELMAR.—Thanks for your kind attention and suggestion—"acting on which hint we spake."

S. V. R. BUCKBEE.—Yours, with $2.50 for blanks, to hand. We have not yet (April 22) received them.

H. HOSMER, Chillicothe, Ill.—We thank you most heartily for the very acceptable contribution of games. The Hampe's Kt's Opening, countered by a gambit, is particularly interesting. You cannot send too many of such contests.

GEO. E. CARPENTER.—Your very welcome letter and enclosure, and critique, to hand; but in putting in the carte you left out "J. U. T."

THEO. M. BROWN.—Your explanatory epistle came safely; we at once forwarded you a package of such Probs. as you require—with a counter explanation. Will you favor us with a correct version of "Envious Yet Careless?"

N. NICHOLS, Manchester, N. H.—Thank you for an account of Chess interests in your city; the prospect of rallying so fine a club is indeed gratifying.

AN INTERESTING CRITIQUE.—A most valued and faithful contributor sends us the following, among other things, in a recent interesting letter; and, as the CLIPPER'S Chess column is devoted first and foremost to the interest of its own contributors, we need no apology for giving the extract, to the exclusion of any outside matter whatsoever. He says:—"Prob. 570, by Patterson, is very difficult and very fine—of its kind. But I do not approve of this class of problems, as a general thing. Of course I refer to the use, in rendering the idea, of more than two Black Bishops. While the author deserves great credit for the conception of this design, and that of 'Finis Coronal Opus,' I do not think either of them eligible to compete for a prize in an ordinary Tourney. Understand, I do not detract anything from the author's recognised ability as a composer; but I merely wish to enter my protest against any innovation upon the rules generally adopted in regard to the construction of Chess Problems. There are ideas enough that can be rendered by using the customary number of pieces and pawns only, without having recourse to means which, if once generally accepted as legal, would greatly increase the facility of construction of problems, and thus be the means of lowering the present standard of Chess Opera in this branch of the art. I take the author's conception to be:"—[you are the first to solve 570]. "These two ideas, if they could be rendered by the ordinary methods, would form two of the finest compositions—one in three, the other in four moves—ever produced." So candid and ingenuous an argument should be answered in spirit like unto that in which it is propounded. What says Patterson?

SOIREE GYMNASTIQUE IN FRISCO.—The Olympic Club, of San Francisco, Cal., gave another of their attractive gymnastic exhibitions at their rooms on Sutter street, Friday evening, March 15th, which was attended by the fashion and elite of that fast growing city. The programme was opened by Messrs. Russ, Lawton and Elliott, on the horizontal bar, Russ doing the giant swing, which is considered the acme of gymnastics, to the delight of all present. Mr. Lawton's feat of balancing himself on one foot on the same bar was equal to the Japanese professional, who performs the trick with the aid of an umbrella. Carroll and Hart made a very pretty display of what had been pasted into them by Prof. Clark, shot out right and left, and in such quick and scientific a manner that no doubt remained in the mind of the audience that either was, to a great extent, master of the beautiful science of self defence. Hart stopped well and used his left with telling effect, at times, whilst Carroll gathered himself up and moved around as lively as a flea. After the boxing C. F. Townsend, the young gentleman who is so fortunate in having such an elegant shape, displayed the most wonderful flexibility of body. Next in order was the Pyramid Ladders, by Messrs. Bennett, the strong man; Lamb, the silent; Hutchinson, the ambitious; and Brown, the courteous, in which all were most excellent. A number of neat double tricks on the mattrass used for occasions of that kind, by Messrs. Elliott and Lawton, were quite difficult, as also very amusing. The ending of the first part was done by Messrs. Strong and "Tappeiner," the latter being a youngster who can, with a little more practice, outdo either His Japanese Lowness, "Allright," or his confrere in the trick of walking to the top of a thirty foot ladder, and during the ascent and descent perform several dangerous feats. Mr. Strong balanced the ladder full as well as his Japanese rival, and is said to be the first outside the pale who has dared to compete with cousins of the Tycoon. A short intermission introduces feats of tumbling, by Messrs. Ladd, Lamb, Hutchinson, Elliott, Lawton, Townsend and Bennett; Messrs. H. Ladd and Fred. Hutchinson performed the difficult double somersault. T. R. Butler entertained the spectators in his club swinging, and went through the performance with a degree of grace scarcely looked for in one of his build. After the club exercise, Lawton performed, to the great amusement of everybody present, the celebrated pole trick of the Japanese, La Perche Equilibre, by Geo. Brown and Chas. A. Bennett, was a most difficult and daring piece of gymnastics, and both gentlemen deserved and received their due meed of praise. The last act of the evening was the zampillerostation, Messrs. Russ and Ward, two of the most finished athletes of the Club doing successfully what professionals are in the habit of performing, in the presence of vast audiences, all over the world, such a feat being looked upon as marvelous. After the gymnastics, the floor was cleared for a hop, in which all enjoyed themselves to their full.

CHALLENGE TO SWIMMERS.—Theo. P. Donaldson of this city thus writes: "I am willing to swim any gentleman amateur in the United States or Canada, their own distance, for a silver cup or gold medal. An acceptance through the N. Y. CLIPPER will bring me to your office with the ready." Mr. Donaldson's offer ought to elicit a response. Why not get up a swimming tournament? Last year we had a swimming challenge from "over in New Jersey," which went by the board and was not accepted. If that challenger is around this season, he and Donaldson may come together.

BILLIARDS.

The Standard American Billiard Tables

AND COMBINATION CUSHIONS.

These Billiard Tables have received the unqualified approval of the best players and most competent judges, who have universally pronounced them unequalled for general excellence and durability.

Seven distinct patents for improvements in Billiard Tables have been granted to us by the United States Patent Office, and we have lately obtained a patent from the French Government for our improvements in billiard cushions.

We employ, in the construction of our tables, a variety of machines specially made for the purpose, by which means we are enabled to insure a scientific and mechanical accuracy hitherto unknown in billiard manufacture.

AMERICAN CUE CEMENT.—Price for large bottles, 50 cents. Warranted the best in use.

City Summary.

MONDAY, April 29th, '67.

WE ARE in the midst of another revolution, and verily these are moving times, times that try men's souls, and put their tempers to a painful test. "Whether it were better to bear the ills we have, or fly to others we know not of," is the question that suggested itself to us the other day when our "rapacious landlord"—all landlords are rapacious, you know—notified us to "git up and git," or sign "articles of agree ment" to pay just twice as much rent as we have heretofore paid. Calmly we looked that notice in the face, and patiently did we consider the question in all its bearings. Could we get into worse quarters? was our first argument. How stands "the situation?" We are domiciled on an upper story; immediately over us is the habitation of a German trombone player, who gives lessons to aspiring youth ambitious of learning how to play that base instrument, or the clarionet and big drum. Morning, noon, and after theatre hours at night may this harmonious trio of instruments be heard in all their dulcet strains. You know what a horribly squeaky noise the clarionet makes in the hands of men not entirely great players, don't you? And you likewise can bear witness, doubtless, to the frightful thunder of a big drum when thumped upon by a reckless and unprincipled amateur. Add to these discordant elements the brazen mutterings of a second hand trombone, and you can then understand our sufferings. In a room adjoining ours is a young girl that runs a sewing machine; that we do not object to. Beneath us is the meeting room of the "Fishball Dramatic Association," who meet three times a week for rehearsal and "mutual advancement in the histrionic profession." Frequently they are doing Othello, Hamlet, the Jibbenainosay, Handy Andy, Jack Sheppard, and a dozen other "diversified characters" at the same time, with slashings of swords in "mortal combat" to the tune of "Villikins and his Dinah." These are but a few of the ills we already bear. Would it be safe to "go back" on the rapacious collector of rents, and risk falling into others ten times more terrible than these? No! it would not be safe, and so we and the landlord signed articles for another year from May 1st, 1867, the latter assuring us that there was a possibility of his getting rid of the trombonist and "spout shop;" but we have no faith in the promises of a greedy landlord who cares not for the sufferings of others so that he gets his twenty per cent. over and above all expenses. And such is "high" life in the metropolis. Postscript—The trombonist is going to leave, but the spout shop remains. The "Momentous Question" now is, who will get the crazy musician's apartments? We begin to regret the departure of the Israelites, after all. We sicken at the thought of the place being hired for political mass meetings. Woe is us, woe is us!.....We had reason to believe that Easter week would revive business in theatrical circles, and that after the usual abstinence during Lent the saints and sinners would be only too glad to make their ventree—as we say in French—at their favorite haunts of public resort, and enjoy the spicy bills of fare prepared for their recreation and amusement. "Not so, me noble duke," as Louis Napoleon said to me when we asked him if he intended coming to see the "Black Crook." Not so, indeed, for scarcely a place was "crowded from pit to dome" on any one evening during the week, and even the "Black Crook" exhibited a falling off among the "upper circles" of society. This was not the case "when war winged its wide desolation and threatened our land to destroy," for then everybody was flush, and everybody wanted to be amused, and everybody spent money "regardless of expense." Ah! "them was the bully times," as we heard a professional bounty jumper remark the other day when contrasting the "harvest of war" with the barrenness of peace. Yes, the harvest of death was the most bountiful, and the barrenness of peace the most merciful. But these things are looked at in different lights, and the Blue Lights even now can see nothing repulsive in war so long as their own policy is not disturbed. But nix kum araus, as the lagerbier dispensers would say on the Sabbath day. .....Did you hear anything of the rumor that we are to be treated to a hurdle race down Broadway? No? Why, they do say that Harry Gates and Dennis Ready are getting ready for a race along that great thoroughfare—that hurdles are to be placed at every street from Canal street down, and that the final leap is to be over the High-Loew Bridge at Fulton street. It is further rumored that our Aldermen and Councilmen are to be let in "the ring" in consideration of their fencing in Broadway, and permitting a charge to be made to all who desire to witness this extraordinary "trial of speed and endurance." Goodness knows! how such an exhibition won't draw. We don't believe the report, however. If 'twere so, Gates would open on it, and give us the earliest information.....Wish we were a minister; they not only have permission to visit the Paris Exposition, but have all their expenses paid, besides. Wonder why we was'nt brought up to that business, any how. It pays better than running a newspaper, and a body doesn't have to take half as much sass, either. Who ever heard of a minister being "smashed on the Irish snoot" because some devoted follower "didn't like the tone of his discourse?" And what preacher man ever got clubbed because he happened to say that Jimmy Smithers' actions on the stage were not conducive to the welfare and dignity of the drama? Talk about editors' perquisites, and the courtesies and attentions they receive! Why they ain't nothing at all. Suppose they are invited to public dinners, or Japanese receptions, or the opening of a new lunch route, and such as that. Suppose they are, we say. What is expected of a feller in return? Lies, baseless fabrications, and weak inventions. He must make a handsome notice of the lun-banquet, and make hash do duty as roast turkey, convert liver into canvas-back duck, and video into green seal. Ah! you don't know what an editor has to put up with. Let a poor teacher go to a grocery store after two or three cents worth of salt; what do they charge him? Just half price, because he's a minister. Let an editor go on the same errand, and if the green grocer knows him to be an editor, hang it if he won't charge him just double what he does any common person. Editorial perquisites, forsooth! Nice perquisites, there. Suppose he does get invited on the trial trip of a new ship, or steamboat, or shallop, or canal boat; what then? Ten to one if he ain't called an impostor, or dead head, or something of that, and probably be almost starved to death in the bargain. Ministers can go all the way to the Holy Land and back with Gen. Sherman without paying a cent; but let an editor try on that little game. Better for him had a mad dog bitten him. Why we'd sooner be an actor, or manager, even than a poor editor, for they do have some fun. If they have made a heap of money, a nice dinner is provided for them—and that, too, when they don't need any dinner—"prior to their departure for Europe." And they have gold watches, silver plate, diamonds, and other valuable mementoes thrown at them with a recklessness worthy of a better cause, so to speak. The more wealthy an actor becomes, the more costly things he has thrown at him. Some ignorant and evil-minded people assert that these valuable trophies are paid for by the recipients of the same. Pure envy, nothing else. You never heard of an editor being presented with such things, did you? Why no, of course not. Why so? Because he isn't wealthy enough to occupy them. We shall never forget an incident that once occurred in our editorial career; a number of "admirers" and "constant readers," whom we had unintentionally benefitted in some way or other, held a meeting for the purpose of considering the propriety of getting up a testimonial for us. After a vigorous discussion as to what the testimonial should consist of, whether it should be a handsome gold watch and chain, a diamond pin, a complete dinner service of silver, or two horses and a wagon and dog, one of our "admirers," a matter of fact sort of cuss, squelched the whole business by saying:—"You'd better give the poor devil a barrel of flour; it would be like throwing pearls before swine to give him such gewgaws as gold watches, and diamonds, and that." Blamed if we even got the barrel of flour. Had we been an only son, the "heir to vast estates in England," we'd have fetched the "testimonial," sure. We said that some of our managers are going to Europe, didn't we? Well, if we said it, we'll stick to it. "Business of importance" calls them away. Of them it may be said:—

"True patriots they, for be it understood,
They leave their country for their country's good."

Don't misunderstand us, reader; when we say they leave their country, etc., etc., we mean that they go to engage fresh attractions for their country, and so forth. An individual came to us the other day, and says to us, sis he, "When are you going to Paris?" The man meant well, no doubt, but we thought he "had a great stock of impudence," as our lamented parents used to say. "Our Jim" wanted to club him out of the office with our 42-pounder, but "better counsels prevailed," and he was gently let down the hatchway, for it is truthfully said that "a merciful man is merciful to a beast." But enough of this; let us to business, and ring up the curtain on the show, and tell the world of Fortune's favors, of Death's doings, and spread the general news from pole to pole, and our newly acquired Russian possessions.

EDWIN ADAMS was in the city last week, and left on April 25th for the West. He sails from this city on May 20th for California under an engagement of ten weeks to Thomas Maguire.

WHEN BARNUM learned that he had sustained an inglorious defeat at the despotic hands of the Cast Iron Man, did he whine over it, and punch his Happy Family, or smash his wax figures? Not he. With praiseworthy fortitude he buckled on his curious armor, renounced politics and all future contests with Cast Iron constitutions, and resolved to make his Museum a more attractive place than ever. He engaged more people and more curiosities, Yankee Locke being among the former. Locke, on the understanding that his engagement would continue as long as he continued to draw, has appeared in a variety of characters, among them being Podejiah Peasley, in which he made His ✝ Mark, and will repeat his successes for the current week. Let us all go and see Peasley make his mark.

DAN BRYANT is in town. It looks quite natural to see Dan back again in the good old city of New York, where he achieved fame and fortune in the past, and where, we trust, he will again locate at no very distant day. Dan opens at the Arch Street Theatre, Philadelphia, on the 13th inst., for a brief term, and that will close his engagements abroad. During the summer, as usual, he will have possession of Wallack's Theatre.

RUINS! RUINS! The sites whereon stood the New Bowery and Winter Garden are but sorry sights, for nothing but a mass of charred ruins meets the eye. It is reported that, owing to some unforseen circumstances, Winter Garden is to be rebuilt, after all. We cannot vouch for the truth of such report, but tell the tale as twas told to us.

ANOTHER rumor current has united in the moire antique bonds of matrimony the well-known actress Ada Clifton to Mr. E. Mollenhauer, the equally well-known musical celebrity.

And wondered we what pleasure took him,
When off his fiddles he forsook 'em;
But now we see that he was drivin'
To the blest abode of Ada Clifton.

AS MARETZEK and his conglomerated troupe of all nations vacate the Academy of Music on the 4th inst., another foreign organization will take their places, Risley and Maguire's Japanese Jugglers, Acrobats, and wonder-workers, being announced to give their opening performance in this city on Monday evening next, May 6th. In previous issues of the CLIPPER we have given notices of their acts and customs. In Philadelphia they were well received, and in Washington they made a better show than that given by Congress.

"THE SACRED TRUST" was presented at the New York Theatre on April 22d, and kept the stage during the week. As we stated in our last issue, it is the old play of "Corporal Cartouche," produced at the Winter Garden two seasons ago. It was very well placed upon the stage by Messrs. Baker and Smith, and in several instances was creditably enacted. Mr. Gomersal, as the Corporal, performed the role with earnestness, and deserves great praise, for it is a character out of his usual line of business. He succeeded in pleasing all who were in attendance, and proved that he is an actor possessed of considerable versatility. His pantomime business was well done. Mark Smith seemed to be out of his element in the role of the General. Mr. Baker was too affected as Robert. Joe Smith made as much of the part of old Jacques as possible. Miss Vere, a child of about eight years of age, did exceedingly well as Adele. Mrs. Gomersal sang and acted, as she always does, to the satisfaction of all present. "Blondin on the Tight Rope," an old but very laughable farce, was also produced. Mr. Gomersal, as the servant and afterwards as Blondin, convulsed his auditors with laughter. He was very funny on the tight rope. Mrs. Gomersal also did well as the maid Sarah. She was encored for the singing of the "Girl Wot dresses in Blue." The attendance was very slim during the entire week, except on Friday, when Mr. Gomersal had a fair house for his benefit. The re-opening of the theatre last week was a speculation of Mr. Gomersal's, but we doubt if the receipts reached the expenses within one thousand dollars.

"FOLKS THAT PUT ON AIRS" should not visit Kelly & Leon's Minstrel Hall, for if they do Eph Horn will make them feel bad, particularly when singing his song with the above title. He hits them off in good style, and, while not saying anything offensive, goes just far enough to create a fund of humor. Eph has made a hit here, particularly in his act of the "Temple of Mystery." This week he appears in an old time song and several new acts. Leon appears in new acts. Leon is undoubtedly one of the best impersonators of female characters at present in this country. He dances with grace, and is as quick on his pins as any one we ever saw. His pigeon cuts and toe movements are equal to the execution of a majority of the principal danseuses in this country. W. S. Bradworth is popular in his banjo solos. Master Steve Rogers appeared last week in a clog dance, and, for his age, he is a very neat dancer. He copies after Dick Sands, and succeeds admirably; he promises to become equal to the best in the business.

FOR TWENTY YEARS the establishment now known as Bryants' Minstrel Hall has been one of the most popular places of amusement of New York. It was here that E. P. Christy, for over ten years, gained a world wide celebrity with the original Christy Minstrels. He opened there in March, 1847, and made a fortune in Negro Minstrelsy. The Bryant Brothers then took the establishment, opening Feb. 23, 1857, and held possession until last season, when the minstrels withdrew, and the Bryant Brothers, in conjunction with Charley White, reopened the hall as a variety place of amusement and have continued to manage it up to the present writing. The lease of the Bryants' expires on May 1st, when the building passes into the hands of another party, who intends remodeling the auditorium and opening it as a first class eating and fancy cake saloon. The Bryants could have secured the place for a longer period for minstrelsy, but the owners refused to allow it to be used any longer as a variety theatre. The last performance is to take place on April 30th, when all of Charley White's Troupe will appear in a well selected programme.

W. S. ANDREWS has retired from the stage, and is now a Deputy Revenue Inspector in Brooklyn.

"FORTY FEMALE JACK SHEPPARDS" appeared in gorgeous array at Tony Pastor's Opera House last week, and created quite a sensation among the Bowery lads. The piece in which they appear is a musical burlesque—very cleverly arranged by John F. Poole, the native dramatist—on the "Forty Thieves," and has been gotten up very well by TOBY, who as Ganem Baba, a young sport, makes things pretty lively when he is on the scene. T. G. Riggs' make up and acting of Morgiana is excellent. This line of business is a specialty with Mr. Riggs, and in it he is quite successful. The rest of the characters were splendidly rendered, and the piece was a success, the house being well filled each evening, and on several occasions crowded. Bueno Core, the "Fire King," appears in a fire act, applying hot irons to his flesh.

KELLY AND LEON'S MINSTRELS do not vacate their hall, at least for the present, all reports to the contrary notwithstanding. It is reported that they received tempting offers to visit Paris during the Exposition, and for a certain consideration offered to dispose of their lease—which has five years to run—to Charley White, but Charley thought the figure named too high. This, coupled with the company giving up the idea of going to Paris, precludes any one obtaining the hall.

EDMUND FALCONER, late lessee and manager of Drury Lane, the Lyceum, and Her Majesty's Theatre, London, Eng., and who has been in this city for some time waiting for an opportunity to obtain an opening on Broadway, commences an engagement at the Olympic Theatre this evening, appearing as Julian Di Vivaldi in his own romantic drama of "Night and Morning," and as Thaddeus O'Flaherty, in his Irish comedietta of "The O'Flahertys; or, the Difficulties of Identifying an Irishman." The company engaged by Mr. Grover for his dramatic season—which runs to Sept. 1st—consists of C. J. Fyffe, Geo. Clair, Belvil Ryan, W. Davenport, E. French, Aug. Fenno, Humphrey Bland, W. Denniston, Kate Newton, Mrs Farren, Mrs. Eldridge, Lillie Eldridge, Miss Harrison and Miss Blake. Mr. Grover's new local piece of "Treasure Trove" is not quite ready, hence the engagement of Mr. Falconer.

JOHN BROUGHAM has postponed his proposed trip to Europe this summer. He has also cancelled his engagement in Philadelphia, which was to have commenced at the Walnut on April 29th.

THE NEW YORK THEATRE is now in the hands of a body of workmen, who are preparing it for the re-opening, on May 6th, by the Werrell Sisters. It is said that the steeple will shortly be taken down, and that considerable improvements will be made in the auditorium.

"THE MAN ABOUT TOWN," a well known personage, appears this week at the minstrel hall presided over by those representatives of burnt cork: Messrs. Griffin and Christy. A new act called "Two Gentlemen of Verona" will also be brought out, with Otto Burbank and Mr. Griffin as the two Veronians. Among other acts down on the bill we notice that Otto Burbank does "Old Bob Ridley," Johnny Boyce is on for a stump speech, and George Christy will show up "Hunkee Doree." The management of this house talk of lowering their hall so as to have their saloon of minstrelsy on the first floor. At present they have one of the handsomest and best arranged halls in the country.

HARVEY DENWORTH retires from the musical department of Niblo's Garden with the close of the present season.

J. G. HANLEY, late stage manager at the Winter Garden Theatre, succeeds Mr. Selwyn at Wallack's Theatre.

W. S. ANDREWS took his benefit at the Olympic on April 26. The attendance was good, but not large. Mr. Andrews' impersonation of Dundreary, in "Our American Cousin," was well received, but Mr. Stuart Robson's Asa Trenchard failed to awaken the least enthusiasm. He cannot play the role.

MAGGIE MITCHELL has terminated her four weeks' engagement at the Broadway Theatre, and gone to Boston to delight the Hubites with her "Fanchon." She played to most excellent houses last week, and for her benefit on April 26th appeared as Margot, in "The Poultry Dealer," and as Gertrude, in "The Little Treasure," to a crowded house.

MR. AND MRS. BARNEY WILLIAMS re-appear at the Broadway Theatre this evening in a new Irish drama entitled "The Shamrock."

THE RICHINGS' OPERA TROUPE terminated their engagement of six weeks at the Olympic on April 27th, on which occasion Miss Richings took a farewell benefit. The troupe appeared in Brooklyn on the 29th to a good house.

THE OLD BOWERY THEATRE was sold at auction for the second time on April 23. A short time since it was sold for $107,000, but owing to some informality it was put under the hammer again. The property consists of the theatre building, said to be worth about $40,000, with all the wardrobe, properties, machinery, scenery and fixtures, and six fine lots of land. The property was sold under a decree of the Supreme Court. There are two mortgages on the property, one of $40,000 to Mr. W. B. Astor, and one of $7,000 to Mr. J. L. Giles. $80,000 was first offered, and $1,000 bids ran up the price to $104,000. It was on the point of being knocked down, when $500 was cried. The property was finally knocked down at $106,000, the purchaser being Mr. Leopold Bampeimer. The property is said to rent for $14,300. Mr. Fox's lease expires on the 17th of May. N. H. B. Clarke and George Brooks are spoken of as the next lessees.

PAPA BATEMAN adheres to that good old proverb which says—"Take fast hold of that which is good, let it not go, for it is thy life." If your memory is not defective, you will remember that a long time ago Augustin Daly, a dramatist and critic, was compelled to enter suit against Miss Bateman for monies due for services rendered in writing, and otherwise attending to seeing the lady well bestowed. She pleaded infancy, and the suit against the infant fell through. Then Mr. Daly commenced proceedings against Mr. Bateman, who is not an infant. The jury awarded Mr. Daly the amount of his claim. Then Bateman pere applied for a new trial, but this was denied him. Tenacious of his greenbacks, the father appealed to the General Term, and the arguments were heard during the past week, but up to the present writing no decision has been rendered. Well may our critical friend exclaim "give us this day our Daly bread."

E. B. WILLIAMS, right name Adam Brock, familiarly known as Potter Williams, and a good representative of old men, died on Blackwell's Island on Sunday evening, April 21st, and was buried on the 24th in Mark Smith's lot at Cypress Hill. The funeral took place from the Baptist Church in Second avenue near Twentieth street, and a large number of professionals attended. He was born in Albany, N. Y., December 25th, 1824, and made his first appearance on the stage at the Albany Theatre, as Player King in "Hamlet." First appeared in this city in 1847, at the Chatham Theatre. In 1852 was at the National Theatre, Boston, Mass. He was the original Potter in "Still Waters Run Deep" in that city, and made such a hit in the character that he was ever after called "Potter Williams." At the commencement of the present season in Rochester, N. Y., Mr. Bayless secured him as his first old man. When the "Black Crook" was produced by Mr. Bayless, he acted as stage manager. A few weeks ago he came to this city on business for Mr. Bayless, and while here was taken sick, and confined to his bed at the Revere House with typhoid fever and softening of the brain. During his sickness he was attended by his brother and a number of professionness he was attended by his brother and a number of professionals. Why he was removed from the Revere House to Blackwell's als. Why he was removed from the Revere House to Blackwell's Island we have not heard, as he had money deposited in the safe Island we have not heard, as he had money deposited in the safe at the hotel. But he was taken from the hotel and application at the hotel. But he was taken from the hotel and application made for his admission to our hospitals, which was denied; why, made for his admission to our hospitals, which was denied; why, made, we know not. He was then taken to the Island where he lingwe know not. He was then taken to the Island where he lingered about a week and then died. Unlike most professionals he ered about a week and then died. Unlike most professionals he had of late years husbanded his resources, and at the time of had of late years husbanded his resources, and at the time of his death owned a small farm in the western part of this State, his death owned a small farm in the western part of this State, and had a little money in a Rochester bank. and had a little money in a Rochester bank.

THE "PARISIENNE" BALLET TROUPE, engaged by John E. McDonough for the "Black Crook," left this city for Cincinnati, O., on April 28th.

JAMES LINGARD commences his management of what has been known as Wood's Theatre this evening as a variety place of amusement. Scarcely any alterations have been made in the theatre. A few flats have been touched up by the scenic artist, the proscenium has been repainted, and the auditorium cleaned. A round box office, similar to the one that was at the New Bowery, has been built in the centre of the long entrance to the hall, which fills up considerably the open space that was there. The company engaged by Mr. Lingard includes the names of Johnny Allen, A. M. Fernandez, Harry Leslie, Lina Windell, M'lle De Vere, Mons. Grossi, Lizzie Whelpley, Augusta Walby, Julia Melville, Carrie Monell, Julia Monell, Lina Forrest, Caroline Dien, Mary Henning, Annie Newman, Mary Stacy, Eugenia St. Clair, Annie Burton, Dick Berthelon, Fanny Forrest, Henri Stuart, Emma Fowler, Monte Vedio, Parkhurst and W. K. Lingard. B. J. Deane is leader of orchestra. This is not a very strong company, as it includes but few first class people. Mr. Lingard must strengthen his company if he expects to succeed with his present prices of admission, which are—parquet and dress circle, 50 cents; orchestra, 75 cents; and gallery, 30 cents.

THE DOBSON BROTHERS' benefit at the Olympic on the afternoon of April 24 was, pecuniarily, a success. Notwithstanding the weather was very stormy, the receipts amounted to $1,000, including tickets sold outside. On the 11th of May they—Charles and Frank—sail for Europe, accompanied by Sherry Corbyn. Charles Dobson is an artist of unquestionable ability. His performances on the banjo at the Olympic on the stage, and in the orchestra at Wallack's, has won for him the title of one of the best banjoists living. His execution is different from any one we ever heard. His delicacy of touch, masterly runs, and marvelous execution is astonishing. His tremulo in "Home, Sweet Home," and his rapid variations in "Yankee Doodle" are wonderful. His playing of the "Shepherd Quickstep" in a minor key, "Madralina," the "Olympic Schottische," and a choice selection of operatic selections are rendered with such precision as to bring forth great applause.

SHERRY CORBYN, of the firm of Corbyn & Wall, Dramatic Agents, sails for Europe on May 11th in the City of Paris. He goes out in search of talent for this country in connection with his agency in this city.

DURING the absence of Sherry Corbyn in Europe, the business of the International Agency will be conducted by Mr. Harry Wall, a gentleman of considerable experience in the show world. Messrs. Corbyn & Wall have a host of performers, both stock and star, on their books, and are ready to transact all business relating to managers and performers. See their advertisements in another column.

EDWARD CHAMBERLAIN, well known among professionals as "Zeke," is to have his benefit at the Olympic Theatre on the afternoon of May 2d. Mr. Chamberlain met with an accident some time since, which has crippled him for life, and he should have a crowded house. The dramatic company at present engaged at this establishment will appear, also several popular Ethiopian performers connected with different places of amusement in this city.

LIZZIE WILMORE (Mrs. Wm. Ellerton) made her debut in this country at Niblo's Garden on April 22d, as Carline, in the "Black Crook." She sang "Going on a Pic Nic" and a duet with George Atkins called "When the Balmy Breezes Blow." She is rather petite in person and has a pretty face, but failed to make a favorable impression. Her singing is fair to middling, and her acting is rather tame. The "Crook" continues to bring much money to the treasury.

"THEODORA, ACTRESS AND EMPRESS," is the title of a historical drama in five acts by Watts Phillips, copies of which, besides various other plays, etc., may be procured of H. C. Husted, of 102 Nassau street, this city, as will be seen by the advertisement of the firm in another column.

THE WORRELL SISTERS—those three sprightly and attractive young ladies who drew young and Old America to their performances when here before—will appear before us on Monday evening next in new characters; that is, in a managerial capacity, they having leased the New York Theatre for the present and next season. As New Yorkers are noted for their gallantry, it is to be hoped that they will give the lady managers a hearty welcome and good encouragement. On the opening night the sisters will appear in some of their best parts. Don't forget Monday, May 6th.

LOTTA has been obliged to stop playing for awhile, and is at present confined to her room at the Metropolitan Hotel in this city. She has lost her voice, which will no doubt, after a rest, come around all right again.

"THE FLYING SCUD," one of Boucicault's latest London successes, was produced for the first time in this country on the 24th April, at Wallack's Theatre. Strange as it may appear, the only portions of the play that may be considered successful are those sporting incidents which transpire in the two first acts, and in which a very well arranged representation of the Derby race is given. After that the play is scarcely worth looking at. Mr. Young, who, when the opportunity is offered him, never fails to make his mark, carries off the honors of the play as well as the blue ribbon of the turf.

PERALTI, Maretzek's latest acquisition, made her debut at the Academy of Music in this city on the 25th of April, and sang herself into favor at the first pop. Her voice, of a light soprano character, is pronounced sweet and clear, and her execution of difficult passages rank her as a No. 1. Maximilian will clear out on the 4th inst.

SHOUTS of laughter greet the San Francisco Minstrels every night at their hall of wit and humor, 585 Broadway, where they have established themselves as great favorites with the public, and among the best representatives of Ethiopian minstrelsy ever seen in this city. Notwithstanding they are playing the same old acts they have had on their bills at times for over a year, they attract most excellent audiences, and the four managers have a good "divi" every week.

A NUMBER of performers are wanted for various sections of the country by those well known dramatic agents, Messrs. Rivers & Co., who have a number of advertisements in the current issue of the CLIPPER. Among their many wants they need a boss canvas man, a side show blower and a hand organ. This firm also publish a card warning the public against certain attaches of a circus company that are said to have absconded in the night. For particulars as to their other cards turn over to our advertising page.

DAVIS & CO. are still in the dramatic agency business in this city, and, as announced in their advertisements elsewhere, are prepared at all times to devote their attention to the wants of managers in securing talent to fill up vacancies and obtain engagements for professionals in every branch of the show business. They have a number of advertisements in this issue of the CLIPPER.

Dramatic.

OUR MOBILE correspondent states that since the departure of Joseph Jefferson the stock corps have held possession of the boards up to the present writing, benefits being the order of the day. Wednesday night, 24th ultimo, a testimonial benefit to the management took place, when "East Lynne" was produced. On Monday, 29th of April, Edwin Forrest was to have commenced an engagement, supported by Miss Lillie, Mr. Barton Hill and the whole stock corps. Harry Pearson, Wellman and other members of the New Orleans Varieties Theatre, have also been engaged to support Mr. Forrest during his engagement. Mr. Forrest is also engaged by Messrs. Roig and McDonough to play at New Orleans, Memphis and Milwaukee.

"OLD COCKADE" is the title of a comedy translated from the French and produced at the Boston Museum this week.

JOHN E. OWENS has terminated his engagement at the Howard Athenæum, Boston, and is followed this week by Maggie Mitchell.

MME. SCHELLER closed her engagement at the Opera House, Pittsburgh, on April 27th. She appeared during the week as Lorlie, Desdemona, Portia, Ernestine, Katherine, Mariana and Clothilde, in the comedy "When Women Weep." A correspondent says:—"Business has been fair, and would have been greater if it had not been for Thayer and Noyes' Circus, which is drawing crowds nightly. J. N. Gotthold, who passed through Pittsburgh from Cincinnati, made three appearances at the Opera House as Othello, Shylock and Julien St. Pierre. He made a good impression as Othello and St. Pierre, and became a favorite in Pittsburgh. The new comedy by Messrs. Methua and Jones entitled 'When Women Weep' has been received with great delight, and is a sparkling little piece. Mme. Scheller will go from here to Milwaukee. She is engaged by Manager Mills for two months."

FROM MEMPHIS, TENN., we are advised of show business thereabouts by our correspondent under date of April 23, who says:—"Edwin Forrest will certainly appear at the new Memphis Theatre on or about the 5th of May.....A large and fashionable audience greeted Mr. James Carden last evening at the new Memphis Theatre on the occasion of a brief engagement as a star. Mr. Carden, by his gentlemanly bearing and fine talents as an actor last season made a large circle of friends while acting as leading man at the new Memphis Theatre. Since that time he has filled an important position at the Crescent City. The drama of 'Last in London' was produced and well put upon the stage. Mr. Carden gave a true, natural and life-like personation of the character of Job, and was most deservedly applauded. He received the rare compliment of being called before the curtain three several times during the performance of the drama. This is the last week of the regular season at the new Memphis. Forrest brings a company of his own—some of the Mobile company and some from Cincinnati."

CHARLES P. NICHOLS, leading heavy man, may be engaged by addressing him as per advertisement in another column.

LOUISE PAYNE WRAY is now the lessee of the Little Rock Theatre, Arkansas. The lady announces in our advertising columns that she is always prepared to negotiate with first class artists.

VERY fortunately for John E. Owens, by a change in the route of the European Circus he will have a fair field at Music Hall, New Haven, Conn., April 30. "There's many a slip" slipped just right for the Owens-Tayleure exchequer.

THE SEYMOUR DRAMATIC CLUB are doing "The Drunkard" in the valley of the Naugatuck, Conn. As there is a gin mill in the several towns to every tenth male citizen, it cannot fail of appreciation.

RISTORI shows as Mary Stuart, Queen of Scotts at New Haven, Conn., May 1st. Admission $2.50. Good gracious! This is circus night, and tragedy has to compete with sawdust.

A WALKING LADY or juvenile woman is wanted for the Theatre Comique, Cincinnati, O., by Manager James A. Oates. See advertisement.

JAS. E. MURDOCH brought his Philadelphia engagement to a close on April 27th. During the four weeks he remained at the Chestnut Street Theatre he attracted large audiences, on several occasions the house being crowded in every part. A new play called "After Many Days," written by Mr. B. E. Wolf, and produced under the direction of Mr. Joseph C. Foster, is now the attraction at that house, the first performance being given on April 29th.

LADY DON, who opened an engagement at the Arch Street Theatre, Philadelphia, on April 22d, was welcomed to the Quaker City by a large audience, who frequently testified their gratified appreciation of the lady's acting and singing by loud applause. Lady Don will close her engagement there on May 4th, and will be followed on the 6th by Mr. J. W. Wallack, for six nights, and he in turn will probably be succeeded by Dan Bryant.

MRS. LANDER (J. M. Davenport) was announced to appear at the Walnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia, on April 29th, the engagement to continue for two weeks. If merit always elicited its due reward, Mrs. Lander should have a succession of crowded houses.

MISS CAROLINE E. HOFFMAN, of Philadelphia, will shortly make her debut in that city in Italian opera.

FROM THE PACIFIC SLOPE, our correspondent, under date of March 25th, says: "The bright star, Alice Kingsbury, whose brilliant light has for so long a time illuminated the Opera House, has at last vanished. She made her last appearance and took her farewell benefit last night, at Maguire's Opera House. No actress ever met with better success on this coast than she; and yet I cannot call her an actress of great merit; she has a piquant way of her own; a certain lisp when she speaks—a certain laugh when she laughs, that charms her audience, and makes them overlook what, by the nice critic, is termed faulty elocution, unnatural laugh and awkward gestures. She leaves for the East by the overland route.....Miss Pauline Congor made her debut March 20th, in 'The Wife.' It was the the most promising debut I have ever witnessed. She elicited a good deal of applause from the large audience, and was called before the curtain at the end of every act. Mr. Pierpont Thayer (a promising young actor,) who was her instructor, may be well proud of his fair young pupil. The 'Fast Family' will be produced to-morrow. Mr. Harry Edwards, a finished actor, who has gained a host of admirers in this city, takes a benefit on March 28th; 'Julius Cæsar' will be produced.....The Martinetti Troupe have returned from an up country tour. They will produce a pantomime called the 'Black Rook' shortly. (See elsewhere.—Ed. CLIPPER.).....Miss Olivia Rand, a young lady of this city, is announced to appear in a musical burletta at the Opera House, on April 1st. It will be her first appearance on any stage. The young lady is said to possess fine vocalistic powers.....An original play, entitled 'The Curse of the Country,' written by a gentleman of this city, will be produced at the Opera House on March 28th. I understand that this play is from the pen of Mr. Devoe, the author of 'Ireland Shall be Free.'.....Charles Tibbets, manager for Maguire, still continues to be dangerously ill. Fears are entertained of his recovery.....Mad. Jaffa, pianist from Honolulu, arrived here on March 15th. Madame Jaffa started from Sydney in the Golden Sunset, which was wrecked on the coral reef surrounding Enderby's Island. Madame Jaffa, her husband and four children were rescued by the brig 'Kamehameha Fifth,' and taken to Honolulu. This lady, who has met with such a sad misfortune on her way hither—having lost everything in the world—was a pupil of Jaibhan, of the conservatoire of Liege.....The polyglot performance of 'Othello' took place last evening, at the American Theatre, George Pauncefort played Othello in English; M. Bonnet performed Iago in French; Herr Roger filled the part of Cassio, reading it partly in German and partly Danish. Pierpont Thayer performed Roderigo; Mrs. Pauncefort was the Desdemona, and Franklein Meyer played Emelia in German. There was a very small audience present....."Griffith Gaunt' is to be revived on the 29th, at Maguire's."

FOR THE NEW CHESTNUT STREET THEATRE, Philadelphia, Pa., ladies and gentlemen of talent are wanted for the season of 1867-68, as will be seen by Manager Sinn's proclamation in our advertising columns.

MRS. ANNIE SENTER LANGDON'S address is advertised for in another column.

THE NEW OLYMPIC THEATRE, St. Louis, Mo., may be rented for dramatic and operatic performances by addressing Charles M. Elleard, as per advertisement in another column.

MISS ANNA LEVERING can be engaged for leading business for the forthcoming season by addressing the lady as per advertisement in another column.

TWO PREMIER DANSEUSES and a score of coryphees, for the ballet, are advertised for in another column by Annie Sefton.

FIVE SOLO DANCERS and a number of ladies for the ballet are wanted by R. Fitzgerald. See advertisement.

M'LLE HALLIE ARLINGTON, an attractive soubrette and juvenile actress, may be engaged for the forthcoming season by addressing Messrs. Corbyn & Wall, as per advertisement in another column.

CARNER & HENRY'S BROADWAY THEATRE, etc., is reported to be a mammoth affair, and well calculated to please the audiences in the places where they appear. The concern has been doing a good business, we are informed, in Jamestown, N. Y., and other places, and was to go from thence to Corry, Pa., to open on the 25th of April. The proprietors advertise in another column for talent, including a good singing and dancing chambermaid.

THE RECEIPTS of the different places of amusement in Boston for the month of March were as follows:—Boston Theatre, $21,207; Continental Theatre, $16,027; Boston Museum, $12,285; Morris Brothers' Opera House, $10,064; Theatre Comique, $10,010; Howard Athenæum, $6,005.

JAMES E. MURDOCH was seized with a fit of vertigo during his performance of Hamlet at the Chestnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia, on April 23d. He reeled and fell to the stage. Mr. Frank Lawlor promptly assumed and finished the which, when demanded, was not forthcoming, and the house was not allowed to open its doors. Mr. Joel Davis, the manager and lessee, called upon Mons. Zanfretta, of the Zanfretta Troupe, (who were then playing an engagement,) to advance that amount, but Zanfretta, 'Be gar, could not see him in zat light,' and would neither play nor pay, so the Adelphi remained closed, and remains so up to this time, and all for the small sum of forty-four dollars! Many of the people engaged in the regular company are complaining bitterly of the shabby treatment they have received at the hands of the management; some have two and three weeks salary due them, and not enough money to take them back to Louisville, where many were engaged for the spring season. The theatre certainly made money during Laura Keene and Lotty Thompson's engagement, leaving aside the $500 made by Ristori breaking her engagement.....The company, to make a little money for their present expenses, were tendered a complimentary benefit by the citizens on Monday night, but the affair was pecuniarily a failure, as the gross receipts amounted only to about $55.....The Zanfrettas played to a pretty fair house on Saturday night last at the New Theatre, and then left for the North.....Sargent, the Wizard, opens at the New Theatre to-morrow (the 25th.) He stays three nights."

MANAGER BAILESS opens Corinthian Hall, Rochester, N. Y., for a brief season on the 6th inst., with a portion of the Japanese Troupe. The dramatic season commences on the 13th with J. W. Wallack as the star. The dramatic company are notified to assemble on the stage for rehearsal on the 10th inst.

LADY DON commences a six-nights' engagement at the Academy of Music, Albany, N. Y., on the 6th inst., and goes thence to Buffalo for five nights. She then forms a dramatic combination and opens in Harrisburg, Pa., on the 20th.

THE "BLACK CROOK" was produced at Deagle's Varieties, St. Louis, Mo., on April 24th, and has made a great hit. Deagle bought the right of producing it in St. Louis, Mo., from John E. McDonough, giving him $1,500, and $25 for each performance. On its first night the audience rose electrically to their feet and shouted themselves hoarse bawling for Deagle and for Sherwood, and for Noxon, and welcomed their approach to the footlights with a roar of plaudits. The Democrat of that city has gone into ecstacies over the piece, and pronounces its production superior to New York or Boston.

"ARRAH NA POGUE" was played all last week at Portland, Me., with Sheridan as Shawn, and Miss Webster as Arrah.

J. H. HACKETT was the star at McVicker's Theatre, Chicago, Ill., the past week. The "Merry Wives of Windsor" kept the boards until April 27, when Mr. Smith, the usher of the theatre, was up for a benefit. Edwin Adams is the current star.

FRANK E. AIKEN was the recipient of a benefit at Wood's Museum, Chicago, Ill., on April 26th. The "Stranger" and "Don Cæsar De Bazan" were performed. "Cherry and Fair Star" is on the bills for this week.

FITZ SIMMONS commenced an engagement at Charlotte, Mich., on April 23d in his sensation play of "Belle of the City." Fitz, who played Seth Howard, was supported by J. M. Murray, Thad. P. Varney, G. W. Stevenson, J. S. Murphy, Florence May, Mrs. Thad. P. Varney and others.

C. W. COULDOCK was at the Salt Lake City Theatre the week ending April 13. He appeared as Louis the XI, Richelieu and Jew of Frankfort.

ANNIE SEFTON is prepared to arrange with proprietors and managers of large halls in the States of Virginia, New Jersey and Pennsylvania for the production of the "Black Crook." Annie has secured a dramatic company and a corps de ballet for the proper representation of the piece. See advertisement.

MR. BOOTH'S engagement at the Boston Theatre continues. At his benefit on April 25th the house was crowded to witness his performances of Shylock and Petruchio. Mr. Booth remains in Boston two weeks longer, producing "Richelieu" this week.

JAMES H. HARRIS, who is said to be up in the business as property man, can be engaged, as will be seen by an advertisement elsewhere.

MISS E. ANDREWS can be engaged for the fall and winter season for first old women and heavy business. See the lady's card elsewhere.

THE JAPANESE TROUPE—Eastern wing—under the management of Mr. Marshall, are said to have met with much favor in New Haven, Conn., where they appeared last week. This week they commence at Bridgeport, Conn., for the first two nights, and go thence to Albany, N. Y., for May 1st and 2d; Syracuse, 3d and 4th; and commence next week in Rochester.

MURRAY & BLAKE'S COMPANY opened in East Saginaw, Mich., on April 15th, with Miss Kate Fisher as the star. They advertised "Mazeppa" and had a full house, but the management announced that the agents who had insured the building thought the risk too great, and would not allow them to play "Mazeppa." The audience were disappointed, but the piece substituted was well played.

ELIZA NEWTON, comedienne and burlesque actress, has organized a dramatic company for the purpose of visiting the principal cities throughout the country, and announces in an advertisement in another part of the CLIPPER that she is prepared to negotiate with managers for the appearance of her company for the production of all the latest comedies and burlesques. Miss Newton is an excellent singing and burlesque actress, and with the company she has engaged will no doubt give a good entertainment. In her company will be found Mr. W. Ellerton, from the London Theatres, lately arrived in this country, and said to be a good eccentric and burlesque actor; Messrs. Eberle, Burroughs, Williams, McCluskey, Mesdames Emma Morton, Hattie Thorne, Le Brun and others. Mr. Charles E. Pratt is the musical director; Jas. Schonberg, stage manager; and L. M. W. Steere, business agent. They open in Hartford, Conn., on the 2nd inst., for three nights, and go thence to Springfield, Mass., on the 6th, for the week, and Worcester for three nights.

MAXWELL'S DRAMATIC COMPANY gave two entertainments in Lockport, N. Y., April 24th and 25th, presenting the popular spectacular drama of the "Black Dwarf." Our correspondent says—"The scene of the romantic grotto and the transformation scene gave by far the best satisfaction of anything ever here before. In a pecuniary point of view, his entertainments were successes of the grandest kind. This evening (26th,) Manager Maxwell takes a benefit tendered by the company, and as he himself is an old Lockport boy, it is expected to be a rouser. He opens in St. Catherine's, C. W., on April 29th."

CARNEB AND HENRY'S "BROADWAY THEATRE" opened at Jamestown, N. Y. on April 17th, for six nights, in "Othello" and "Irish Tutor." "Camille," "Don Cæsar," "Fanchon," and "East Lynne" were successively produced. A correspondent says:—"On April 24 Maude St. Leon Garner was made the recipient of a benefit, on which occasion the 'Wept-of-Wish-ton-Wish' and 'Solon Shingle' were offered. At the close of the first piece Mrs. Garner was called before the curtain and presented with a handsome set of silver (six pieces.) The presentation was made by Mr. Saml. T. Allen, on behalf of a number of the citizens of Jamestown, and was gracefully acknowledged by Mrs. C. The company go to Corry, Pa., for three nights, commencing April 25th."

MISS FANNY B. PRICE is in the second week of her engagement at Cleveland, O. Her new drama entitled "Our Mattie, or the Double Appeal," is underlined.

JOHN S. POTTER, with a dramatic company, opened in Kansas City on April 22 in "Napoleon's Old Guard," "The Stage Struck Barber," and the "White Family." The company consists of R. M. Johnson, Nellie Grover, Geo. Burt, Geo. A. Fisher, Mrs. Agnes Burt, Eliza Logan Burt, Clara Burt, H. A. Hale, J. A. Jones, C. W. Holmes, S. E. Pemberton and John S. Potter.

MAD. SCHELLER continued to be the star at the Opera House, Pittsburgh, Pa., last week. Our correspondent "Richelieu" says:—"Mad. Scheller gave us on April 22 'Lorlie, or the Black Forest,' which was produced to a fair house. On Tuesday Mr. J. Newton Gotthold put in an appearance, in conjunction with Mad. Scheller. Mr. Gotthold appeared as Othello. His rendition was excellent. Mad. Scheller as Desdemona was very good. Iago was well rendered by Mr. Leak. On April 24 'Merchant of Venice' was produced, with Mad. Scheller as Portia and Mr. Gotthold as Shylock. It was a rare treat to witness the rendition of the above character. It met the approbation of the brilliant audience present, and both were warmly applauded. On the 25th the drama of 'Foster Sisters' and 'Taming the Shrew' were produced to a fair house. Walter Brown, the celebrated oarsman, appeared between the pieces in the Indian club exercise. Mr. Leak introduced him to the audience with a few remarks, which were warmly applauded. To-night (April 26) Mad. Scheller takes her farewell benefit, when the drama of 'Peasant and Countess' and the comedy of 'When Women Weep' will be produced. Mr. Gotthold will appear for the last time this evening. He has become a favorite with the audiences during his short stay with us. Emma Skerritt's benefit did not come off on April 22, as I informed you. I suppose it was postponed on account of Mad. Scheller's re-engagement. It will, however, come off on April 29th..... Great preparation is being made at the Opera House for the 'Black Crook,' which will be produced early in May."

EDWIN BOOTH'S first appearance in Providence, R. I., took place at the Academy of Music on Friday, April 26, before a densely crowded audience. "Hamlet" was the piece selected, and at his entrance the audience rose en masse and gave him the grandest reception ever extended to any one in Providence. The receipts were $1,723 at the prices of $1.50 for reserved seats and $1 admission. He was supported by the entire Boston Theatre company, who were conveyed to and from Providence in a special train.

COMEDY reigns at the Holliday Street Theatre, Baltimore, Md., John S. Clarke putting in an appearance on April 29 in "Everybody's Friend" and "To Parents and Guardians."

AT THE CONTINENTAL THEATRE, Boston, Mass., Marietta Ravel was presented on the 24th with a handsome silver service. On the 25th Leonora Creed was also presented with an elegant silver basket of the choicest floral offerings; also, a rich diamond ring. Both ladies are of French descent, and deserve the favors bestowed upon them.

Circuses.

HAIGHT AND CHAMBERS' CIRCUS AND MENAGERIE, says a correspondent, "Opened in Evansville, Ind., on April 15, to two of the finest houses I ever saw. The canvas on both occasions was filled, and hundreds left, being unable to obtain admission. But at night there was an act performed that was not on the bills. Some erudite youth sought the cavernous hiding place of the water valve of the steamboat's boilers, and by a slight twist of the wrist let escape from the aforesaid boilers all the water they contained. The result was that when the firemen fired up the boilers were literally burned up. Nothing daunted, the company pitched their canvas again, and with a sufficient amount of dodgers to notify the citizens of Evansville of the fact, prepared to give another show. Finding the boilers irreparable, the company were compelled to stay two days longer than they had been advertised, and both days' business was but a repetition of the first day in the city. The managers succeeded in procuring a tow for Henderson, Ky., where they were not advertised, but by the aid of more 'dodgers' succeeded in doing a fine business. On the 20th they showed in Owensboro', Ky., being advertised to show there on the 17th, but notwithstanding they were three days behind time, they found their two centrepole canvas inadequate to the task of holding all that made application for admission. Although they have been compelled to miss stands, yet the company have done a wonderful business, and having procured a towboat, will be enabled to make all of their stands until the machinists complete the work of placing two new boilers in the steamer Coosa, when she will again plough the raging waters of the Ohio. Harry Burdeau joined the party April 20, having engaged for the tenting season with this company. He is a profitable accession, being an A No. 1 acrobat. C. S. Burrows also joined the party in his new and original trapeze performance. This performance is different from any trapeze performance I ever saw, consisting of balancing on ladders, chairs, &c., while the trapeze is swinging, an entirely new feature. The show appears in New Albany on April 22d, and goes thence up the Ohio. Charlie Seaman, leaper and jig dancer, and Mad. Macarte joined the show on April 21."

HITCHCOCK & CO.'S MENAGERIE, while exhibiting at Waltham, Mass., on April 23, had an accident which caused considerable excitement for a while. The seats on one side gave way, and about four hundred people were precipitated to the ground. A boy had a leg broken, and a woman a shoulder dislocated.

BEN JENNINGS was the recipient of a benefit at Yankee Robinson's Coliseum, Chicago, on April 19, and was greeted by a large audience. He was presented with a silver tobacco box. This is thought to be his last appearance in the ring.

MIKE LIPMAN'S CIRCUS is expected in Washington about May 1st. The Star says Forepaugh's Circus took away fifty thousand dollars. Mike should make a note of this and try it himself.

THE ADDRESS of C. W. Lakeman, an energetic and experienced member of ye paste brigade, will be found in our advertising columns. Read it.

DAN RICE'S CIRCUS was to be at Huntington, Pa., on April 29th.

MAGINLEY, CARROLL & CO'S CIRCUS was at Fond du Lac, Wis., on April 27th, and was to remain there three days. The show was then to take railroad for the west. Marie Carroll, Mad. Carroll, Mad. Tinkham, Miss Lauret, W. B. Carroll, Jas. Tinkham, the Holland Family, Belmont Brothers, C. Fowler, Dan Shelby, A. J. Remington, J. Cummings, F. Bowers, Frank Richards, Billy Erwin, T. Clutter and James Bargelt are in the company.

ANNIE YEAMANS, who made a favorable impression while playing at the New York Theatre in this city, in company with her husband, joined Metcalfe's Circus last week in St. Louis, Mo., and met with success. Annie is an experienced equestrienne, and as such gained favor in Australia.

"THE GREAT UNITED STATES CIRCUS AND MENAGERIE," Joseph Cushing, manager, will exhibit in Providence, R. I, May 1st and 2d.

THE NEW YORK CIRCUS, which closes the season in this city on the 4th inst., starts out on the 6th for a traveling tour during the warm months. The show commences its summer campaign at Stamford on the 6th, and goes thence to Norwich for the 7th, Bridgeport 8th, New Haven 9th, Meriden 10th, Springfield 11th, Hartford 13th, Willimantic 14th, Norwich 15th, Phœnix 16th, and Providence 17th and 18th. The company travels by rail, and includes the following performers: M'lle Carlotta De Berg, the dashing and intrepid equestrienne; the Runnells Family, James H. Madigan, the somersault rider; James E. Cooke, the excellent leaper and four horse back rider; the Levantine Brothers, Billy Ducrow, Joe Pentland, John Madigan, Jos. Hazlitt, La Petite Ducrow, S. P. Stickney and others. All the trained horses, ponies, mules and buffalo go along. A new water-proof pavilion has been made expressly for the concern, and the trappings and appointments are pronounced brilliant. The organization of the company will be as follows: L. B. Lent, director; E. D Colvin, treasurer; C. Boswold, leader of the band; C. W. Fuller, contracting agent; John H. Wicklin, advertising agent; Cady Howes, boss canvas man; and Wm. Wallace, master of transportation. The company expect to return to this city early in September. Taken altogether the show is one of the best in the country, and we trust that it will meet with success.

LEVI J. NORTH, JR., better known as Kit North, son of Levi J. North, died at Columbus, Ind., of consumption, on April 18th. He was a splendid rider, a good vaulter, and was well known in the profession. The members of Lake's Circus, and Mr. and Mrs. Lake, did all they could for him during his sickness. The band of the Circus turned out and escorted his remains to the depot. His mother accompanied his body, which was sent by express to Brooklyn, N. Y., for interment. He was liked by every one that knew him. He was nearly 14 years of age.

LAKE'S CIRCUS was at Seymour, Ind., on April 22d.

HITCHCOCK, CUSHING & HORN'S MENAGERIE is billed ahead as follows:—Fall River, Mass., April 30th; Providence, May 1st and 2d; Phœnix, 3d; Pawtucket, 4th; Woonsocket, 6th; Milford, 7th; Worcester, 8th; Natic, 9th; South Boston, 10th; Charlestown, 11th, and thence down East.

JOHN ROBINSON'S CIRCUS AND MENAGERIE exhibited in Hamilton, Ohio, on April 22d, in opposition to Van Amburgh's Menagerie.

YANKEE ROBINSON'S CIRCUS was to show at foot of Randolph street, Chicago, on April 27th. The company have been showing between Chicago and Milwaukee the past week.

THE EUROPEAN CIRCUS is to show at New Haven, Conn., May 1st and 2d, a day later then first announced, Birmingham, April 30th; Waterbury, May 3d; Bristol, 4th; and Meriden, 5th.

THAYER & NOYES' CIRCUS spread their canvas on Red Lion Lot, Pittsburgh, Pa., on April 22d, and, says a correspondent, "they performed to crowded audiences every evening during the week. The concern appears in Allegheny on April 30th and remains for three days."

CAMPBELL'S OCCIDENTAL CIRCUS pitch their tent at Keokuk, Iowa, May 1st, and Madison 2d. They are en route for Omaha, Nebraska.

FOREPAUGH'S CIRCUS is doing a splendid business, we are told. At Trenton, Highton and Freehold, New Jersey, the canvas is said to have been packed full at the afternoon and evening's performances. This week the concern will appear at New Brunswick, N. J., on May 1st: Elizabeth, 2d; Newark, 3d and 4th; at Orange, 6th; Paterson, 7th; and Hackensack, 8th.

Negro Minstrelsy.

"OH! HUSH!"—This very popular Ethiopian comicality, which was first brought into favor through the acting of the late T. D. Rice, is up for presentation at Hooley's Minstrels, in Brooklyn, the current week. John Mulligan, in all his loftiness, is to represent Gumbo Cuff, while the exquisite Sam Johnson is to be "done brown" by Cool White. "The Shadow Pantomime" is also revived, by which all the patrons of Hooley's may enjoy a free trip to the moon. The Bowery Boys will be present, and will endeavor to convince the audience that they are the "Happiest Couple Out." And then we are promised that laughable burlesque on "Camille," in which Archy Hughes and J. W. Glenn appear to advantage. A rare good bill is provided for all fond of Ethiopian eccentricities and vocalistics.

NOTWITHSTANDING the reported trouble in the ranks of Coes, Purdy & Converse's Minstrels while in Baltimore, that organization opened at Wall's Opera House, Washington, D. C., on the 22d ult., to a very full house, and have since been doing well, our correspondent informs us, who adds:—"Mr. Geo. H. Coes is interlocutor, and, as Williamsburghers can testify, he is good; S. S. Purdy and Johnny Pierce maintain the ends well, and get off a few puns that are new, while they do say many things that are old enough to vote. Minstrel parties visit this city so seldom that the people are just frantic when anything of the kind is offered; hence (in a measure) the good business of the present organization. The idea of having but three minstrel companies visit the capital of the nation in ten months is enough to drive people to other cities to see this style of entertainment."

COTTON'S MINSTRELS did a good business at Elmira, N. Y., on April 17th and 18th, and succeeded in leaving a good reputation behind them as a talented troupe. Their route ahead is as follows:—Brantford, C. W., April 29th and 30th; Guelph, May 1st; Galt, 2d; Hamilton, 3d and 4th; Lockport, 6th; Buffalo, 7th and 8th; St. Catherines, 9th; Toronto, 10th and 11th.

LEW. RATTLER arrived in San Francisco, Cal., on March 17th. He was announced to appear at the Academy of Music.

SAM SHARPLEY occupies the Howard Athenæum, Boston, with his minstrel band, the month of June, commencing operations on June 10th.

J. TANNENBAUM, leader of orchestra, at present with Cotton's Minstrels, may be engaged after July 5th. See advertisement.

COTTON'S MINSTRELS are to perform at Lockport, N. Y., on May 5th.

MANAGER CHAS. H. DUPREZ is making some rapid movements out West with his original New Orleans Minstrels. Last week we announced this troupe at Nashville, Tenn., this week we inform our readers that they appeared at Milwaukee, Wisconsin, the 25th, 26th and 27th ult. Mr. Duprez is noted as a shrewd manager, and generally succeeds in realizing his share of greenbacks. We quote the following from the papers of some of the cities where they have performed:—"DUPREZ & BENEDICT'S MINSTRELS.—By general consent, the troupe now playing at Masonic Hall is pronounced one of the very best that has ever visited Nashville. The unbounded merriment and roars of laughter which responded to the performance last night fully attested the satisfaction of the audience and the intrinsic merits of the performers. In the way of genuine fun and original comicalities, Lew Benedict is ahead of any burnt cork artist we have yet seen. He must be seen and heard to be appreciated. Then the music furnished by the troupe, both vocal and instrumental, is of the very finest order."—Nashville, Tenn., Daily Banner. "This great troupe of minstrels, without any question the very best in America, gave their first concert at Music Hall last night. They were welcomed by a fashionable and appreciative audience. Their concert was the best ever given in this city. Everybody was delighted—rapturous in applause. There was not a word spoken, not an act or movement to offend the most refined taste. There was such a combination of melody, wit, and humor as fairly captivated and enraptured the audience, and the company have made a popularity as wonderful as it is merited."—New Albany, Ind., Morning Ledger. "The suicidal weather of last evening was sufficient to make any manager despair of realizing a profitable audience, but we never knew our people to "stand back" on a good minstrel performance, and hence Duprez & Benedict had a large audience last night, and in return gave a programme replete with good music, wit, dance and sentiment. In fact, we hazard nothing in saying it is the best minstrel troupe that has ever visited our city. It has the rare merit of introducing much that is new."—Terre Haute, Ind., Daily Express.

SAM SHARPLEY'S MINSTRELS are doing a good business through the New England States. Sam appears upon the end nightly, and is as funny as in the "days of yore."

NEWCOMB'S MINSTRELS were at Indianapolis last week three nights, and are said to have done a big business. They opened in Chicago, on April 29th, for three nights, and go thence to Milwaukee for three nights. Arlington is not with the troupe.

SHARPLEY'S MINSTRELS are still flourishing in the eastern section of Uncle Sam's dominions. On the 29th they were to show at Salem, Mass.; Lawrence on the 30th; Biddeford, Me., May 1st, and from thence the Iron Clads would steam up for Portland, Bangor, and Augusta, and then retravel the same route. On May 4th they are to give the citizens of Newburyport, Mass., a taste of their talent. Mr. Sharpley has secured the Howard Athenæum, Boston, to shine in during the summer solstice, which is good for the modern Athenians.

WILSON'S OPERA HOUSE, St. Louis, is reported to be doing a splendid business with Messrs. R. M. Carroll, Cool Burgess, J. C. Campbell, Billy Allen, Harry Talbott and J. R. Kemble.

LA RUE'S MINSTRELS were announced to be at Hamilton, C. W., April 30th, and May 1st; Toronto, 2d, 3d, 4th and 6th; and Brantford, 7th and 8th.

BEN COTTON'S MINSTRELS were at Williamsport, Pa., on April 22d, where they played to good business, and at Elmira, on the 23d. A correspondent says:—"Ely Hall was not large enough to contain the people who turned out to greet them. Ben is an old favorite in Elmira. At Canandaigua, on the 24th, business was good, which is saying about all that can be said for that town. Rochester, Medina and Albion, at which they performed on April 25th, 26th and 27th, respectively, proved profitable investments, although LaRue's and Lloyd's Minstrels were billed in all those places. The Cotton party cross to Her Majesty's dominions this week, opening at the New Music Hall, Brantford, C. W., on the 29th and 30th, and go thence to Stratford for May 1st, and Guelph, 2d.

LA RUE'S MINSTRELS gave two of their entertainments at Corinthian Hall, Rochester, N. Y., on April 24th and 25th. Our correspondent, "Percy," says:—"On each occasion the hall was crowded to overflowing, and from appearances every one was highly pleased with the performances. The troupe is one of the best, in every particular, that has visited our city in many months. The quartet has attained a high position in vocalism. The ballads by Messrs. Sweet, Fredericks and Brandisi were rendered in fine style and heartily encored. The end business of Manning and Eagan is good, much credit being due them for discarding the old hackneyed gags which every newsboy knows by heart. In the second part Manning carried the audience by storm with his original and quaint witticism. Kanane and West, of terpsichorean fame, have greatly improved since their last appearance here, and are good cards."

LA RUE'S MINSTRELS appear at the Royal Lyceum, Toronto, C. W., May 2d, and remain four nights. They go thence to Brantford for the 7th, London 8th, Chatham 9th, and Detroit 10th and 11th.

DIED.—In Toronto, C. W., Mr. W. H. Granger, for a number of years connected with various minstrel bands as a musician, but more recently with Buckley's Serenaders. Mr. Granger had been in ill health for a long time, and gave up his position with the Buckleys in consequence. He leaves a wife and one child.

ARLINGTON HALL, Chicago, Ill., opened with Arlington's Minstrels on April 23d. Every evening during the week the hall is said to have been crowded.

BOB ARELL, of the Mechanical Hotel, Pawtucket, R. I., has just completed the organization of a new minstrel troupe, and they give their first public exhibition at McClellan Hall, Providence, R. I., on May 1st. Charley Greene appears on the bone end, with Charley Coggeshall as tambo, while Bob does the middle business. Mr. Jerome Eston is agent and A. W. Sibley treasurer. The company are to make the entire tour of the New England States in hacks purchased for this purpose.

J. G. H. SHOREY AND E. GREEN are fitting up a minstrel hall in Providence, R. I., which they expect to open during the coming week.

Music Halls.

THE "VARIETIES THEATRE," Memphis, Tenn., is said to be progressing as of yore. Mike Bryan, the banjoist, late of the Academy of Music, New Orleans, has joined the company, and has proved a valuable acquisition. He is pronounced the most original delineator of negro acts that has ever appeared on the Memphis boards. Billy Gray has become a favorite as a general performer. Billy goes from there to Little Rock, Ark. Childs and Carroll, the clog dancers, are still at the Varieties, doing their clog dance. Three new performers from the Academy of Music, New Orleans, appeared last week. The new comers are Johnny Stout, Eugene Gorman and Ada Richmond.

J. L. DAVIS, manager of Poland's Varieties, Nashville, Tenn., when destroyed by fire, intends returning to that city in time to open the New Varieties, which is expected to be ready for occupancy early in September.

AT PARKER'S OPERA HOUSE, Richmond, Va., business is said to have been rather dull of late. The company were to go to Norfolk and Portsmouth last week.

THE VARIETIES, at Galveston, Texas, under the management of H. M. Wickes and T. M. Grant, is said to be gliding along prosperously. The company engaged there for the week ending April 20th, were Billy Sweetman, T. L. Conner, Ben Wheeler, Mary A'Becket, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Dalton, J. H. Keith, Senorita Marie, Mrs. E. Boswell and others.

GRACE DARLEY was the recipient of a benefit on March 28th, at the Olympic, San Francisco, Cal. She appeared as Bob Nettles in "To Parents and Guardians." Kitty O'Neil, Joe Murphy, Frank Prescott and Johnny De Angelis are engaged at the Olympic.

LIZZIE LOUISE DAVIS AND MISS EMMA GERTRUDE were to put in an appearance at the Metropolitan Music Hall, Washington, D. C., April 29th.

AT THE OLYMPIC, New Orleans, Johnny Redden took a benefit on the 17th. He was presented on the occasion with a gold watch and chain by his admirers, and with a gold headed cane by the Robt. E. Lee Base Ball Club. With the assistance of rather obscene posters, Johnny Stout announced his benefit on the 19th.

THE ZANFRETTA FAMILY, Johnny Thompson, Harry Macarthy, Eva Brent, the Zavistowskis and others, were all doing well at the Academy, New Orleans.

M'LLE LAURENT, danseuse, who appeared some time ago in Boston, recently started on a starring tour, opening at the Pittsburgh Varieties on the 22d ult., and we are told that the lady was welcomed by a large attendance.

PARKER'S OPERA HOUSE, Richmond, Va., had the addition of two new faces on its boards last week in the persons of Rosa Vollandt, vocalist, and Billy Chambers, Ethiopian comedian. Fred Cooper, Tim Morris, George Melville, Frank Leslie, John Swift, Fannie May, Sallie Benner, and Annie Clare continue in the company. On May 3d, R. S. Parker takes a benefit.

AT THE VARIETIES, Memphis, there was a crowded house, says our correspondent, on April 20th, for the benefit of Kingsland and Brown. The entertainment was capital throughout, and of the most enjoyable character. Special mention may be made of the banjo performance of Mike Bryan, and Charley White's singing. Several new performers are expected at the Varieties next week.

MARRIED at the Commercial Hotel, Indianapolis, Ind., on the evening of April 18th, by the Rev. Mr. Edson, John H. Haverly to Miss Eliza (Duval) Hechinger, of Philadelphia, Pa. Mr. Haverly was formerly proprietor and manager of Haverly's Toledo Opera House; Miss Eliza H. is a vocalist and comedienne, and sister to Mrs. W. W. Long, of Philadelphia.

THE "THEATRE COMIQUE," late Museum, St. Louis, Mo., was to have been opened on April 27th by Mr. J. E. Esher, he having leased it for five years. As the Varieties will not allow smoking nor the sale of beer, Mr. Esher will undoubtedly do well, it is thought.

BARRY CARTER and Billy Boyd commence operations at Fox's American, on April 29th. The extravaganza of the "Three Fast Young Ladies" is retained on the programme.

J. H. BUDWORTH, of minstrel fame, commences an engagement this week at the Theatre Comique, Boston, appearing in "Peter Piper Pepper Podge." Kate Pennoyer appears in the ballet of "The Fairy's Dream," and as Don Juan in the pantomime of that name.

Miscellaneous.

LA FAYETTE W. SEAVEY is a scenic artist of considerable repute, and gets up transformation and stock scenes, and deals also in artists' materials. Managers and others wishing to negotiate with Mr. Seavey will find out how to address him by referring to an advertisement in the CLIPPER.

BAD POLICY.—We are informed that the proprietor of the Temple at Portsmouth, N. H., is guilty of the bad policy of contracting to let his hall for $20 per night, but when settling up time comes charges $25; that is, he exacts, without previous agreement, $2 for acting as door-keeper, $2 for acting as special policeman, and $1 for ringing the bell in the steeple! All of which will have a tendency to prevent showmen from patronizing him. One manager informs us that he had engaged it for May 15th, but would give it the go by, and never play in it again.

THE "SPAULDING BROTHERS, SWISS BELL RINGERS," are now traveling in the Eastern States, after a successful campaign West. They performed at Pittsfield, Mass., on April 22d to a full house. A correspondent says:—"Their bell playing eclipses everything of the kind I ever before listened to, while the instrumental solo artists (Mr. J. F. Spaulding, violinist, and Georgie Dean Spaulding, harpist,) fully sustained their reputation which had preceded them, and took the audience by storm. Miss Emma Dean sang the 'Naughty Man,' from the 'Black Crook,' very acceptably, and Wm. F. Spaulding dinged his bells with lightning rapidity. Come again."

M. MAZZONI, the magician, is at Mozart Hall, Cincinnati, Ohio, this week.

THE PEAK FAMILY BELL RINGERS (Wm. Peak, Sr., party), returned home to Boston last week. After a little rest they will visit the towns and cities through Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

THE ALLEGHANIANS have to lay up a few days owing to sickness.

SACRED CONCERTS are to be given at the Theatre Comique, Boston, commencing Sunday, April 28th.

THE "TRIBE OF ASA HUTCHINSON'S" concertised at East Attleboro, Mass., April 26th.

SOMERBY AND CO'S. METROPOLITAN GIFT SHOW, with Hadley, the Illusionist, were at Portsmouth, N. H., four nights, commencing on Friday, April 26th.

SMITH'S GREAT COMBINATION AND AMERICAN BRASS BAND, a new organization from Lowell, Mass., we believe, consisting of The Martinez Jugglers, Butler's Pantomime Troupe and the Ronconi Brothers, are advertised for Portsmouth, N. H., May 10th and Great Falls, 11th. The old veteran, J. T. Chesley, is ahead as agent. They show in a mammoth tent seating 2,000 persons.

IMPORTANT TO SHOWMEN.—The Commission of Internal Revenue at Washington decides that any traveling exhibition giving farces, pantomimes or other theatrical performances are liable to a special tax of $100 per annum for each state. This decision, if enforced throughout the country by Internal Revenue Collectors, will cause many variety companies to suspend operations. By this decision all variety companies and minstrel bands playing light farces and pantomimes—including the act called "Shadow Pantomime" now played by several minstrel parties—makes them liable to a tax of $100 for each state instead of $10.

CHARLEY SHAY'S QUINCUPLEXAL TROUPE performed to two large houses in Green's Hall, Vincennes, Ind., lately. From Terre Haute the company went to Mattoon, 23d; Alton, Ill., 24th and 25th; Springfield, 26th and 27th; Jacksonville, 29th; Quincy, 30th and May 1st; from Quincy up the Mississippi river as far as La Crosse, Wis.

VENABLE AND MARSH, of Lexington, Ky., are members of the paste brigade, and advertise to hang out banners on the outward walls for show people and others.

HOWORTH & RATHWELL'S TABLEAUX OF THE HOLY LAND is said to have done a good business. They were in Bowmanville, Canada, April 22d and 23d; New Castle, 24th and 25th; Port Hope, 26th and 27th; in Lindsey, 29th and 30th; Peterboro, May 1st and 2d, and Coburg, 3d and 4th.

THE KEYSTONE BOYS were presented with a clog outfit at Washington, D. C., lately. They are now with Forepaugh's Circus.

PHŒNIX HALL, Concord, N. H., reported to be the largest and best located in that city, may be rented by addressing A. Hutchins, as per advertisement in another column.

A PARTNER for a first-class exhibition is advertised for in another column.

WHO DOES IT BELONG TO?—A correspondent writing from Philadelphia, says:—"About four years ago a party by the name of Dailey (I think) left a panorama, styled the "View of China," with me on storage, to be called for within six months, and it has now been with me ever since and not called for. It is a large panorama and of great value, I suppose, to the owner. Thinking you might trace the owner up, I have written you. I think the party was an Eastern man, and I suppose would be very thankful to receive intelligence of its present whereabouts. The Mr. Dailey who left it was only the agent for it."

THE BUISLAYS were to give a great balloon ascension, together with other entertainments, at the Fair Grounds, New Orleans, on the 22d ult.

A RICH THING is published in one of the Western papers concerning a party of "show folk," and, knowing the parties, we give a synopsis of the affair. Mr. M. L. Townsend, agent for Charley Shay's Quincuplexal; Mr. D. G. Waldron, agent for the Alleghanians, and C. I. Phelon, treasurer of the last named company, happening to meet at a town upon the banks of the Mississippi, they thought to while away the tedious hours of a spare day by a hunt in Missouri. Procuring a "dug out" they essayed to cross the stream, but being unaccustomed to the navigation of "Ye Father of ye waters," their frail bark struck a snag, and our three jolly showmen found themselves floundering in the turbid Mississippi. Being good swimmers they finally managed to gain a position upon the bottom of their wrecked craft, and in this manner were borne by the current majestically down the stream. Their endeavors to right their craft, or make themselves heard upon the shore, were both unsuccessful, and for a long hour they floated on, until brought up all standing upon a bare, desolate island. Here was a fix for our three jolly showmen, for, in their struggle to regain their canoe they had lost their oars and nothing remained for them but to wait until some passing "stern wheeler" should come to their assistance. Signals of distress were immediately hoisted, and our friends prepared to make themselves as comfortable as possible, and wait as patiently as three persons wet through, and in the full face of a cutting north wind, might be expected to, until assistance arrived. Though it was early morning when our friends received their baptism, they were not released from their unpleasant situation until night had begun to throw her sable mantle around, when a tug boat, noticing their signal, put off to the island and brought our worthies to more genial quarters. We imagine our friends will not again seek to pass a day in Missouri, especially if there is a prospect of its being in misery instead.

THE CORY BROTHERS, of No. 199 Westminster street, Providence, R. I., who are proprietors of a music store, and own all the principal bill boards, will act as ticket agents, etc., on application as per advertisement in this and succeeding issues of the CLIPPER.

IMPORTANT TO SHOWMEN.—One of the most important things for managers of traveling shows to bear in mind is where to procure the best accommodation at the most reasonable rates. In this connection we might state that in Hamilton, O., the Straub House has that reputation, and the proprietor, Felix Straub, has the happy faculty, as his given name indicates, of making his guests happy. Further particulars of this establishment will be found in our advertising columns.

A CHANCE TO INVEST in the restaurant business is offered by J. M. Laurence, of Harrisburg, Pa., who will sell his lease of the place connected with the Melodeon Opera House for the moderate sum of $2,800. For additional particulars, see his card in our advertising columns.

MR. GEO. H. MATTHEWS, a portrait painter in Corning, N. Y., gave a reading in Corning Hall on the 24th ult., and report speaks well of him as a reader. We understand that Mr. Matthews intends giving readings in Rochester, Lockport and Buffalo, during the summer.

THE ALHAMBRA GOLDEN SHOWER, a very brilliant and original scenic effect, has been patented both in this country and England by Professor Tanner, to whom managers must apply to procure it. The Professor's address will be found in our advertising columns.

A DOUBLE BASS VIOL, three strings, is advertised for sale in another column by Flem Adams.

THE GRAND CONCERT of Miss Marie Giebert, at Music Hall, New Haven, Conn., last week, is said to have been a failure.

THE JAPANESE did a good business at New Haven, Conn., last week, putting in an extra matinee and evening, April 27th. They are at Bridgeport the 29th and 30th, and at Hartford May 1st, which is inauguration day, or "election parade," as the down Easters call it—on which occasion the city will be overflowed with shad-eaters, military and strangers; thence they proceed directly to Chicago.

A CALF without hair, but perfect in every other way, is advertised for sale as a curiosity in another column, by S. D. Allen. We might add that there are many hairless calves in New York, the additional peculiarity of having but two legs.

A QUARTETTE OF FAIR FEMININES is wanted for a combination show by G. W. Hoffman. Vide advertisement.

J. F. NOYES is the leading individual whose business it is to noise abroad the merits of shows at Great Falls, N. H., by the proper distribution of wall literature. See his card.

GOOD CLOTHES are desirable things to have, and showmen should always go well dressed, so as to appear like gentlemen. Parties wishing to enter a suit should note the call by Samuel Colby in another column.

FRANK LUMBARD'S CONCERT TROUPE open in Chicago on April 30th for one night, at Crosby's Opera House. The route from Chicago will be Milwaukee, Janesville, Madison, La Crosse and St. Paul.

IF YOU CAN'T thread the mazy and want to save yourself the mortification of being left out in the cold while some other feller whirls the only gal that ever you loved over the waxed floor, we would advise you to join Brookes' brigade at once, or at least procure a copy of "Brookes on Modern Dancing," advertised in this issue.

A PARTNER with a capital of $700 or $800 is wanted to co-operate in a magician's exhibition. See J. H.'s advertisement.

C. COLLINS was to take a benefit at Port Jervis, N. J., on April 29th. He was to go thence to Middletown for April 30. He intends appearing in several other towns in that neighborhood.

AS THE SEASON for rope ascensions is at hand, managers desirous of securing the services of a ropist are referred to Pr

AMUSEMENTS.

NEW RATES OF ADVERTISING.

FOR THEATRICAL or other Advertisements coming under the head of AMUSEMENTS, fifteen cents per line for each and every insertion.

FOR MISCELLANEOUS Advertisements, twenty cents per line for each and every insertion.

FOR NOTICES—to be incorporated in our News Departments—such as extracts from other papers, etc., thirty cents per line; the same notice not to be inserted more than once.

In our LEADED OR EDITORIAL COLUMNS nothing of a paid character can appear, as we reserve that space for a free and independent expression of our own opinions.

OUR TERMS ARE CASH. Advertisements to be paid for at the time of insertion.

A LIBERAL DEDUCTION from these rates will be made for Advertisements when paid for three months or longer in advance.

ADVERTISEMENTS should be sent in by noon of Mondays, at latest, to ensure their appearance in that week's issue.
